Mr. Matthew Stewart,

We are writing in response to your letter requesting information regarding our natural gas supply and system reliability outlook.

- 1. Winter readiness- First let me explain that we are a small company having only 191 customers and 115 of those are seasonal hunting camps. We are performing weekly inspections of our entire system all year long for leak detection, frost patrols etc. During cold weather we are involved on a daily basis.*
- 2. Employee Safety/Readiness- We are the employees of the company and we are the owners. We attend any and all training that is available to us when possible.*
- 3. Communications Outreach- Being such a small company we are on a first name basis with most of our customers. We have the phone numbers of all of the customers to get in touch with them if needed in an emergency. We have the keys to many of the camps if we were to need inside. We have many valves in our system so that in case of a loss of service due to a leak or line break we can isolate the area and we will only affect a very few customers. We are serviced by a local volunteer fire dept. that is made up of our customers. Many of them are very familiar with our system. We have a private number for the local electric company.*
- 4. Gas Supply and Planning- We are under contract with a company by the name of Open Flow for any amount of additional gas that we may need beyond what we produce. The system is set up so that if additional gas is needed it will automatically enter our system. We transport the gas thru a National Fuel gas pipeline.*
- 5. Customers- As I stated previously we are a small company with 191 customers and of those 115 are seasonal camps.*

6. Polar Vortex- The extreme cold of Jan. 2014 had very little effect on our system. We did have to purchase more gas from Open Flow Energy, but that is why we have things set up with them the way we do.

I hope this information fulfills your requirements.

Sincerely,

Al Patton
