Logan police to take on intern

By WILLIAM KIBLER
wkibler@harrisburgmirror.com

Logan Township police will take on a student intern, restarting a program that hadn't been used in years. She is Sarah Wilson, a student at Pittsburgh Technical Institute, according to Police Chief Dave Reese, speaking at a recent meeting at which the supervisors approved the assignment. Reese wants to build up the program again, as the criminal justice curricula of post-secondary schools are a potential source of police employees, he said. Asked by Supervisors Chairman Jim Patterson whether Wilson would be subject to danger, Reese said, "absolutely not." The focus will be on observation of administrative and organizational tasks, the department's interactions with other agencies and ride-alongs that aren't risky, Reese said.

"We got away from it," Patterson said of the internship program. "(But) it's good business for us." PTTI reached out to Logan to arrange the internship, Reese said. Wilson will be in civilian clothes during her 11-week stint, Reese said. One current officer, Tyler McConnell, was an intern at Logan, officials said.

DERAILMENT: CSX denies claims

The lawsuit requests unspecified money damages for the injuries suffered by the Scoffees, but also is asking for punitive or punishment damages as well.

The railroad filed a petition in the U.S. District Court on Monday, pointing out that the federal court has jurisdiction in such a case because it is a company incorporated in Virginia with its headquarters in Florida.

The Scoffee lawsuit is in addition to a class action lawsuit filed last year by several other residents of Hyndman, including Robert Cook and his fiancée, Jennifer Queen, Lorelei Gordon and Denora Diehl — all longtime residents who were forced to evacuate their homes after the early morning train derailment.

The class action lawsuit has passed a major hurdle as it proceeds toward trial before U.S. District Judge Kim R. Gibson.

Gibson has allowed the civil action to continue on grounds of negligence and private nuisance claims by the residents.

The railroad has denied the negligence claim and basically denies knowledge of the nuisance charges, demanding proof in court of those claims.

Railroad attorney Edwin

Palmer of Pittsburgh, in filing the petition in the Scoffee case, stated, "By removing the action to (the federal court) CSXT does not admit to any of the facts alleged in the complaint, or waive any defenses, objections, or motions available to it under state or federal law."

According to the most recent lawsuit, CSX was operating a train that included five locomotives and 178 cars, 128 loaded and 50 empty.

Some of the cars contained materials such as propane, eight cars held molten sulfur, others asphalt and phosphoric acid residue.

The lawsuit claims the train was traveling through Hyndman when it derailed, resulting in the release of "hazardous, ultra-hazardous, and/or inherently dangerous materials."

It outlines two circumstances that resulted in the ensuing derailment and the evacuation of Hyndman: compressed air brake system, and the configuration or alignment of the cars.

The train was operated by two crews that day.

The National Transportation Safety Board concluded that conductor of the first crew stopped the train as it was traveling down a slope and discovered an air leak 20 rail cars from the rear of the train.

The crew used 58 hand brakes to stop the train.

A mechanic on the first crew worked on the air leak problem but was unable to repair it.

A second crew took over the train, and the Scoffee lawsuit contends that crew should have known about the air brake problems.

But the second crew operated the train toward Hyndman utilizing only 33 or the 58 hand brakes with the train, traveling at speeds of 20 mph to 30 mph.

The 35th car derailed as the train was nearing Hyndman.

The 35 cars at the front of the train were carrying only 1,631 tons of freight, while the rear car contained 16,621 tons, which the lawsuit stated, was a "dangerous configuration."

It contends "the train was not properly organized to safely and appropriately distribute the weight of the railcars. ... This dangerous configuration contributed to the derailment."

It charges, "This improper railcar arrangement was negligent. ..."

In the two lawsuits now before the federal court in Johnstown there is no statement concerning the amount of damages being requested.

High court declines to take rap artist's case

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court is declining to take the case of a Pennsylvania rapper who was convicted of threatening police officers in one of his songs.

The high court declined on Monday to take the police on gun and drug charges. A song they later wrote about the arrest contains phrases including "Let's kill these cops cuz they don't do us no good."

Both were charged with terroristic threats and other crimes.

Knox argued that the song was protected by the First Amendment, but he was ultimately convicted and sentenced to one to three years in prison. Pennsylvania's highest court upheld his convictions.
