never a waste of money

By TOM AND RAY
MAGLIOZZI

Dear Tom and Ray: I love your show and column, and am a longtime listener and reader. After all these years, I finally have a question for you. I know you guys recommend having a used car inspected by a trusted mechanic prior to buying it. But what about buying one from a dealer? I'm considering the purchase of a 2008 Audi TT under one of those certified used car programs where the cars have low mileage and the dealer does a 123-point inspection. Do you think it's wise to have another mechanic check out the car first? — Barry Ray: We do. Because it may be the 124th point that ends up costing you money later on.

part of a manufacturer's certified pre-owned program definitely increases your chances of getting a nice used car. Presumably, they screen for mileage, accidents and major problems. And that's all great.

Ray: But even if they do a thorough screening, the dealer's primary interest is in selling you the car and getting the maximum possible price for it. In our opinion, it's good to have someone who is entirely on your side in this transaction. That would be a mechanic YOU hire to inspect the car and report to YOU about what he finds.

Tom: Even if he doesn't find evidence of an accident or a major mechanical problem, your own mechanic often can give you some items to negotiate over. For instance, the may tell you that the tires are fine, but they're only good for another 10,000 miles. In that case, maybe you can get the dealer to throw in a new set of tires.

Ray: If your mechanic tells you that the brake discs are starting to warp, you can ask the dealer to replace those before you buy the car, rather than coming back in six months and paying for them yourself.

Tom: And even if your mechanic finds nothing wrong and says, "This is the finest 2008 Audi TT I've ever seen in my life," you'll be able to make the purchase with peace of mind knowing that the car is exactly as represented when you drive off the dealer lot.

Ray: And when you're spending tens of thousands of dollars on a car, we think $100, even if it's only for peace of mind, is always money well spent. Enjoy your TT, Barry.

It's NEVER cheaper in the long run to buy a new car. Want proof? Order Tom and Ray's pamphlet "How to Buy a Great Used Car: Secrets Only Your Mechanic Knows." Send $4.75 (check or money order) to Used Car, P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475.

Public Notice Transmission line construction

PPL Electric Utilities Corp. (PPL Electric) plans to construct approximately 168 feet of single-circuit 138/69 kV transmission line to serve a new substation owned by First Quality Products at their facility in the McElhattan area of Wayne Township. The proposed tap line is located along Landfill Road in Wayne Township, Clinton County.

If you would like more information about this project, please contact PPL Regional Community Relations Director Don Stringfellow at (570) 368-5235.

On December 17, 2010, PPL Electric filed an application with the Pennsylvania Public Utility Commission (PUC), which must approve the project before work can begin. A copy of this application is available for public inspection on weekdays during business hours at:

body's main building materials. The excessive production appears to come from an immune attack that shifts the manufacturing of this tough, fibrous substance into high gear. Skin thickens and hardens to such a degree that bending the fingers can be all but impossible. The face freezes into an immobile mask, unable to smile or frown.

Internal organs suffer the same fate. The kidneys are a frequent target, and, when affected, raise blood pressure and eventually fail. The lungs, heart, blood vessels and digestive tract all can be involved. It's not surprising that scleroderma has many symptoms that depend on which organs are infiltrated with collagen.

Not every scleroderma patient experiences involvement of all the organs I mentioned. I don't know the extent of your nephew's involvement. No cure medicine exists.

Many control medicines do, and the current outlook for scleroderma patients is much brighter than it was only a few decades ago. High blood pressure and kidney failure formerly were the principal causes of death. Today, with medicines called ACE inhibitors, the blood pressure-kidney problems are controllable.

Medicines that rein in the immune system are another step in conquering this illness. Cyclophosphamide is one example. And medicines that are directed at assisting organs damaged by collagen also are available.

You and your nephew ought to contact the Scleroderma Foundation at 800-722-HOPE or at its website, www.scleroderma.org. You'll find it a source of valuable information, and your nephew will realize he is not battling this illness alone.

The valves keep blood moving in the right direction through and out of the heart. When a valve develops a leak, some blood flows back into the chamber it just left. Less blood is pumped, therefore, with each heartbeat. Symptoms arise depending on the amount of blood that flows backward. If the leak is slight, no symptoms develop and nothing is done. If it's large, people become breathless when they are active. Medicines can restore a better output of blood pumped from of the heart. The ultimate solution is replacement of the leaking valve. Rheumatic fever is one cause of leaking valves.

The booklet on heart-valve problems discusses this topic, its treatments and its causes. Readers can obtain a copy by writing: Dr. Donohue - No. 105, Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475. Enclose a check or money order (no

Answer: Normally the heart beats 60 to 100 times a minute. I take your report to mean that your heart is beating normally but more toward the slow end of normal. That's not an illness. That's often a sign of a very strong heart. If the EKG reader thought your heart was dangerously slow, he or she would not have said "not abnormal."
