Public Notice Transmission Line Construction

PPL Electric Utilities Corp. (PPL Electric) plans to construct an approximate 275-foot 138/69 kV transmission tap line to serve a new 69-12 kV substation. The proposed tap line will connect an existing PPL Electric transmission line with the substation. The project will be constructed on property presently under option to PPL Electric, as well as a small section of existing PPL Electric right-of-way. The project is located along Yankee Road approximately 1,500 feet west of Scholls School Road in Richland Township, Bucks County.

This project is required to meet the increasing demand for electricity and improve service reliability to PPL Electric customers in the Richland Township/Trumbauersville area.

If you would like more information about this project, please contact Kathy Frazier at 610-774-3372.

On December 19, 2011, PPL Electric filed a Letter of Notification with the Pennsylvania Public Utility Commission (PUC), which must approve the transmission line before construction of the line can begin. A copy of this Letter of Notification is available for public inspection on weekdays during business hours at the following location:

Richland Township Municipal Building
1328 California Road
Quakertown, PA 18951

If you wish to participate in the process before the PUC, you should contact the PUC at the following address:

Mira Nakashima of Solebury, the daughter of woodcarver George Nakashima, is carrying on her deceased father's vision of a table for peace on every continent.

The Morrow Peace Table was housed at the Russian Academy of Arts.

This fall, Nakashima Foundation for Peace board members gathered with international leaders to mark a historic first, real-time global connection among the three stars by holding simultaneous ceremonies.

This year, the foundation is working to help raise funds for the fourth peace table, which will be created for the Desmond Tutu Peace Centre in Cape Town, South Africa.

Just as George Nakashima once looked at a fallen walnut tree and imagined something greater, Mira and other peace advocates envision a world where people who once clashed over their differences will look across a table at each other and, too, imagine something greater.

To donate toward the project, visit www.nakashimafoundation.org. The studio, on Aqueon Road in Solebury, holds an open house every Saturday from 1 to 4:30 p.m.

School in Gabrana, Ohio — another swing state — about the same topic.

Munnely said the RNC "can call it what they want," but he's happy his students will have the opportunity to hear Biden and Miller speak.

About 100 seniors from CB East, 100 seniors from CB South, and all of the seniors and juniors from CB West will be allowed to attend the 10:30 a.m. assembly of the public will be allowed by invitation only.

Biden will discuss the costs of college and the steps the administration has taken to keep college affordable. He also will call on colleges and universities to do their part to contain costs.

About 96 percent of Central Bucks graduates continue their education after high school, Laws said. Most go on to a four-year college or university.

Laws said more students have been going to community colleges and state-supported colleges immediately after high school because of the increased costs of private colleges and universities.

Munnely said the cost of college has become a significant factor in the school his students choose, more so than the subject they're interested in studying.

He said more students and parents attend the high school's annual financial aid night, and more students are forgoing extra-curricular activities in favor of getting jobs so they save money for college.

About 44 percent of full-time undergraduate students attend four-year colleges with published tuition and fees of less than $9,000 annually and about 28 percent of full-time undergraduates attend private four-year colleges with published tuition and fees of more than $36,000 annually, according to the College Board.

A press release from the White House said the average published tuition and fees at four-year colleges is three times greater than it was when CB West seniors were born 17 or 18 years ago.

About 70 percent of college students have to take out loans to pay for college and graduate with more than $28,000 in debt, the White House press release said.

Liquor board votes to jump prices on 313 items

By MARK SCOLFORD
ASSOCIATED PRESS

HARRISBURG — Customers of Pennsylvania's state-owned liquor stores can expect to see prices increase in the coming months on hundreds of wine and liquor products after a vote Wednesday by the Liquor Control Board.

The 3-0 vote to approve suppliers' requests ended an 18-month moratorium on price increases imposed because of the economic downturn.

Board members said producers have been hit with higher materials and shipping costs, and warned that otherwise the selection for consumers might be reduced.

"We at least need to work with the vendors to make sure the product stays on the shelf," board chairman Joseph E. Brion said.

It was unclear how the higher prices for suppliers would translate at the retail level, because suppliers would be free to put individual items on sale. In December, about 800 of the 4,000 products in a typical store were marked down, PLCB chief executive Joe Conti said.

The board estimated the increase would translate into $10 million in additional sales, of which about $3 million would be profit and $2 million taxes. Based on recent sales history, the higher prices would result in an estimated overall revenue increase of six-tenths of one percent.

The 313 increases will take effect in February and March. The statewide system sells about 30,000 different types of wine and liquor.

Republican Gov. Tom

Corbett and House Majority Leader Mike Turzai, R-Allegheny, are pushing to privatize the state-owned liquor store system, an effort that has stalled in recent months.

Brion, a Corbett appointee, called privatization "something that is going to be looked at more closely than it has in the past."

Another board member, Robert S. Marcus, said he doubted it will happen, citing efforts to modernize the state store system and improve customer service. Marcus was named to the board by then-Gov. Ed Rendell, a Democrat.

The PLCB has more than 4,000 employees and operates about 610 stores.

2 teens killed in Philadelphia

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Police say two teens were killed and two others were wounded in an ambush shooting in Philadelphia.

Authorities say the teens were in a car when they were shot Tuesday night in the city's Junius section. It's believed they may have been Jared to that location.

Two 14-year-old boys were taken to a hospital where they were pronounced dead. Police say another 14-year-old boy was listed in extremely critical condition. The driver, a 16-year-old boy, was in stable condition.

Judge sets timetable for Sandusky case

HARRISBURG (AP) — The judge overseeing the Jerry Sandusky criminal case is establishing a schedule for prosecutors and defense attorneys, and says he plans to hear argument on pretrial issues in less than three months.

The court system on Wednesday released an order by Judge John M. Cleland that requires the attorney general's office to turn over material to Sandusky's lawyers by Monday.

The deadline is Feb. 1 for Sandusky to ask for trial Center County, or to bring in a jury from another county.

Other pretrial motions are due by March 1, with argument scheduled for April 5 in Bellefonte.

A correction

A brief in Wednesday's paper incorrectly stated the type of vehicle the Hazborzo Police Department is planning to purchase. The vehicle being considered by council is a Ford Interceptor Utility.

BETTER CARE, RIGHT FROM THE START

Introducing Neonatology Services

Through our partnership with The Children's Hospital of Philadelphia (CHOP), we're proud to announce the addition of neonatology services as part of the The CHOP Newborn & Pediatric Care Program at Grand View Hospital. We warmly welcome neonatologists Anna Sosnowsky, MD; Richard Korchevski, MD; Sheila Siddiqui, MD; and Adriana Restrepo-Omsby, MD.

The addition of neonatology qualifies Grand View a Level II Neonatal Intensive Care Unit (NICU). Our NICU includes a host of specialized features that allow for advanced care of preemies and infants:

- Six critical-care bassinets
- Specially trained and certified nurses
- State-of-the-art medical technology
- Support services
- Roomy, comfortable areas for parents and families

For more information on labor and delivery or our NICU, call 215-453-4902 or visit www.gvh.org. We also offer tours for parents-to-be.

Montco man admits to DUI with son in car

By MARGARET GIBBONS
STAFF WRITER

An Upper Merion man will have to serve an 18-month probation sentence for driving under the influence of alcohol while his then 1-year-old son was in the car.

William J. McGuckin Jr., 46, of the 200 block of Arbor Road, received the sentence Wednesday after pleading guilty in Montgomery County Court to charges of endangering the welfare of a child and driving under the influence.

McGuckin came to the attention of authorities on April 22 when he arrived at a day care center in the afternoon to pick up his son.

Center officials became concerned when they noticed that McGuckin appeared to be inebriated on his feet and they smelled alcohol on his breath, according to the criminal complaint.

When they asked him if he was someone they could call to pick up the child, McGuckin maintained that he was OK to drive but that he would walk home with the child, the complaint said. McGuckin, with the child, then walked to the rear of the building in the direction of his home. However, day care employees saw McGuckin soon return with his son and get in his car.

Concerned about the safety of the child, center employees called 911 to report a possible intoxicated parent, giving the dispatcher the name of the parent and identifying information of the car he was driving.

A patrol officer, dispatched in response to the call, spotted McGuckin's car traveling on Exton Road when it allegedly failed to stop at a stop sign at Exton and Abbott roads, the complaint said.

Police caught up with McGuckin after he pulled into his driveway.

McGuckin, who admitted to drinking two beers, declined to take field sobriety tests but went with police back to the station where he consented to a breath test. The results of the breath test showed that McGuckin had a blood-alcohol level of between 0.167 percent and 0.176 percent, almost twice the legal limit of 0.08 percent.

While serving his probation sentence, McGuckin will have to perform 48 hours of community service and pay a $300 fine.

Rep. Murt urges students to apply for scholarship

The Pennsylvania House of Representatives Scholarship Program is now accepting applications for 2012.

According to state Rep. Tom Murt, R-152, the program provides two high school students per year a four-year scholarship equal to the value of one semester of tuition at a State System of Higher Education school for each of four years. Students can find application criteria and apply online by visiting www.wvafce.org. The application deadline is March 1.

The program is privately funded by individual and corporate donors, no tax or other public funds are used.

"public benefit conveyances" awarded by the government for nonprofit, public uses when military property becomes surplus.

And while Wednesday's vote was unanimous, board member Steven Nelson — also the Director of Policy for Montgomery County — expressed concerns about future road planning and lobbied for more consideration for the museum's planned expansion.

The board's executive director, Mike McGee, agreed with Nelson that the time is now to begin working with PennDOT and the county on long-term road plans, but did not support giving the museum more property or holding the process up any longer.

McGee's main points revolved around the fact the property needs to generate revenue and giving too much to nonprofit entities could cost the region in the long run. Giving the fact no true development is expected until 2015 and will continue for 10 to 15 more years, McGee said he was comfortable there was enough time to look at possible expansion of their operations over the road.

"We need revenue," McGee said. "What are you prepared to give less of?"

McGee was supported by board Chairman William Whiteste, Vice Chairwoman

Joanna Purie and member William Donnelly.

Wings of Freedom representative Mark Hurwitz spoke Wednesday about their continued desire to acquire the hangar, but added he wasn't prepared to hold up the process. As far as the road network, the plan is being laid out to include a main boulevard extending from Keith Valley Road down the closed runway out to Horseshoe Road. Private, Precision and Norristown roads are also planned to be extended into the property.

RKG representatives will present detailed economic and other pertinent data next month necessary for the board's final submission to the next government.

McGee said he expected the plan at total buildout to generate nearly $5 million annually after expenses.

The "crown jewel" of the plan that has been supported by the public at various meetings is a 27-acre, mixed-use town center of residential, business, retail and open space.

Local officials hope it will drive the development economically and recreationally.

The center is planned between Exton Road and Route 611 in the area of Norristown Road just north of an office park.

For more information about the land reuse authority and to see a copy of "Options for the board" that was approved Wednesday, go to www.khra.org.

Singers

choir was invited to sing at this summer's Olympics in London by KI Concerts, an organization that arranges musical acts from all over the world for the Olympics and major festivals.

After passing a lengthy application process during spring and summer 2011, the students learned they would be one of many worldwide groups to perform as part of the arts and entertainment in the Olympic Village.

"We submitted a CD with five or six songs, and they came back and asked us to perform two in particular," said Dinkins. "One of those is Peter Gabriel's 'Book of Love,' and we'll actually be singing that one during the Olympics."

The group also will be performing folk songs and arrangements of popular music.

The Madrigal Singers, a select group of students who audition for the group, aren't the only ones going. The trip is open to all members of the high school's choral groups who wish to go.

So far, 36 students are committed to the trip this August to perform and take in the sights in Dublin, Ireland and London. Among them will be a few art students, who are looking forward to perusing museums and historic sites. And a couple of students in Tennen's Digital Production course will be supervising the trip. Aside from three formal performances and a few informal concerts in Dublin and London churches, the Tennen students will get to see an Olympic event inside the stadium and the sights, said Dinkins.

Fundraising began in earnest in October to help pull in the roughly $4,000 each student needs to pay for the trip. Families will have to chip in for whatever may still be owed after the fundraisers, including candy sales, a garage sale and pancake breakfasts at Applebee's.

Dinkins is trying to arrange the raffle of a helicopter ride and a flea market in March.

"We're trying to think outside the box," he said. "It's slow going. We're also trying to reach out to companies that sponsor the arts."

Senior Dan McGorey, a member of the Madrigal Singers, is pleased the community has been supportive about this summer's trip.

"I didn't think something that big would happen to William Tennen. I feel like it's a small community, you know?" he said. "I still can't get over it. As soon as we find out what pieces we'll be singing at the Olympics, all our time will go into rehearsing for it. We've got to make sure it's perfect."

Though they'll be singing before vast crowds in the Olympic Stadium, the Madrigal Singers should do fine because they are used to singing in front of audiences outside of school, Dan said. They regularly perform at churches, retired community homes and special events. They'll be singing during the upcoming 50th Madrigal Singers Anniversary concert for alumni, he said.

Melanie Konczewa, a senior with the Madrigal Singers, said the group can be self-critical in its quest for quality.

"But we believed we did really well when we tried out for the opportunity to sing at the Olympics. I'm looking forward to performing there," she said. Manager: emg@phillyburbs.com; email: emg@phillyburbs.com; Twitter: @manseemag

Ads

The Lower Bucks district signed a contract last year and currently has ads, some as large as 5 feet by 10 feet, in 10 of its elementary schools and one of its middle schools. More are scheduled to cover everything from cafeteria tables to locker room benches.

Langry said once the district reaches its goal of having ads on 20 percent of its usable space, Pennsylvania could earn more than $400,000 annually.

While noting that North Penn is in the "very early stages of considering it," District Superintendent Curtis Dietrich said he thinks the idea has potential.

"We need to learn more about it, then we can gauge the community interest," he said.

The chief financial officer at School Media, Janet Miller, said the company just began its second year in business. It's purpose, she said, is "provide an alternative to fund (school) budget deficits."

Miller said the ads are "inspiring, but need to be positive, practical messaging." More and more corporations are getting into the school marketing audience, said the COO.

Asked how she responds to criticism that schools should be free of such commercialization, Miller said, "if you find a different answer to budget deficits, we'll listen. We're helping schools."

Administrators believe Pennsylvania is the first district in the region, and possibly the state, to open its schools to such advertising.

However, a number of area districts, including Centennial and Upper Merion, have sold various companies branding rights.

Centennial licensed the William Tennen High School name and panther mascot image to Modell's Sporting Goods.

When licensed T-shirts are sold at Modell's in Warminster, the district gets a 20 percent piece of the profit. Schools also distribute Modell's discount coupons, for a percentage of sales, and Modell's signs can be seen in the high school stadium and gym.

Upper Merion outfitted its consumer science facility with Frigidaire appliances in exchange for a Frigidaire sign above the rooms.

"It takes a village to raise a family," said School Media's Miller. Freda Samra: 215-245-3001; email: fsamra@phillyburbs.com; Twitter: @thesamra

BETTER HEARING
BETTER LIFE

FEELING OF FULLNESS

Some people describe experiencing such an uncomfortable (and even painful) feeling of "fullness" in their ears that they schedule an examination by a physician. In some cases, fullness in the ears can be caused by hearing loss, which may be confirmed by an audiogram and may be helped with a hearing instrument. Another possibility, "Eustachian tube dysfunction," may arise from a blocked or malfunctioning Eustachian tube, which connects the middle ear with the nasal cavity. It is the tube's job to equalize the air pressure on either side of the eardrum. When there is a blockage on the inside of the eardrum, the air pressure may cause it to bulge, causing the feeling of fullness.

If you experience any discomfort, such as fullness, please call WETHERILL HEARING AND AUDIOLOGISTS at 215-345-1444 to schedule a hearing evaluation. Using the latest advances, we are able to perform a thorough evaluation of the inside parts of the ear and recommend an individualized treatment option. Should you require a hearing aid, we can fit you with a discreet, state-of-the-art hearing aid from the X-Series™ family of hearing products that helps you hear in all types of environments. Our office is located at 10 W. Oakland Ave.

P.S. Fullness (aching in the ears) is an uncomfortable condition that may be caused by hearing loss and possibly helped with a hearing instrument.

Public Notice
Transmission Line Construction

PPL Electric Utilities Corp. (PPL Electric) plans to construct an approximate 274-foot, 138kV transmission tap line to serve a new 69-12 kV substation. The proposed tap line will connect an existing PPL Electric transmission line with the substation. The project will be constructed on property presently under option to PPL Electric, as well as a small section of existing PPL Electric right-of-way. The project is located along Yanket Road approximately 1,500 feet west of Schell School Road in Richland Township, Bucks County.

This project is required to meet the increasing demand for electricity and improve service reliability to PPL Electric customers in the Richland Township/Transmission area.

If you would like more information about this project, please contact Kathy Frazier at 610-774-3377.

On December 19, 2011, PPL Electric filed a Letter of Notification with the Pennsylvania Public Utility Commission (PUC), which must approve the transmission line before construction of the line can begin. A copy of this Letter of Notification is available for public inspection on weekdays during business hours at the following location:

Richland Township Municipal Building
1328 California Road
Quakertown, PA 18951

If you wish to participate in the process before the PUC, you should contact the PUC at the following address:

Rosemary Chelavita, Esquire
Secretary
Pennsylvania Public Utility Commission
P.O. Box 3265
Harrisburg, PA 17105-3265

As a reference aid, be sure to include the project's "docket number," which is A-2011-2279431.
