Applicant principals will be actively engaged in the development and subsequent modification(s) of marketing materials including website, brochures and marketplace training materials. Final approvals from principals will be required prior to use in the marketplace. In particular, training on email, telephone and face-to-face communications will stress the need to communicate features and benefits of products, services and contracts clearly and concisely with prospects and customers. Customer-signed authorization letters will enable the collection of pertinent historical usage data which will then assist in determining product, service, and term options for the customer. These options along with the prospect/customer's stated objectives will help to determine recommended product.

Training for employees will be provided during initial company orientation. For subcontractors, training will be provided prior to contacts with the energy marketplace and any subsequent transactions. In addition, supplier process and system requirements will be communicated as part of training and a requirement prior to contracting business. Tracking and monitoring of both employees and subcontractors market activities will be ongoing. Failure to comply with Applicant and supplier standards will subject employees and subcontractors to disciplinary actions up to and including termination.
