Jeanne,

As of last week, EnerNOC has officially transitioned to Enel X.

This change is a result of EnerNOC's acquisition last year by the Enel Group, one of the world's largest energy companies and a leading innovator in renewable energy and smart energy technologies.

Enel X is a new business line created to deliver solutions to help energy users solve their most complex challenges and capitalize on their biggest opportunities by enabling businesses and communities to make smarter decisions about the way energy is created, stored, and managed.

However, the launch of Enel X is much more than just a name change.

While our customers and partners will still have access to the same expertise, support, and technology that EnerNOC has offered for nearly two decades, becoming Enel X gives us the resources to offer a range of entirely new solutions, such as energy storage and solar-plus-storage systems, electric vehicle charging and optimization solutions, and sustainability and renewable energy services.

For a better understanding of what Enel X can do for your organization, browse through our new website.

For insight into the tactical aspects of the transition to Enel X, read our FAQ.

Of course, feel free to reach out with any questions.

Sincerely,

Michael I. Storch

Jeanne,

On October 1, EnerNOC will officially change its name to Enel X. We wanted to take this opportunity to explain what exactly Enel X is, where it came from, and most importantly, what Enel X can do for businesses.

Enel X is a new business line launched by the Enel Group, one of the world's largest energy companies, to provide solutions to help energy users navigate their unique challenges and capitalize on opportunities in the energy world. While our customers and partners will still have access to the same expertise, support, and technology that EnerNOC has offered for nearly two decades, operating as part of Enel X means that we can also offer entirely new solutions and resources to solve their energy challenges.

To help explain the vision for Enel X and the support we can provide our customers and partners, we created this brief overview.

Jeanne,

On October 1, EnerNOC will officially change its name to Enel X. While the transition will not disrupt your usual experience with us, we are reaching out to provide answers to some of the questions you may have.

Last year, EnerNOC was acquired by the Enel Group, one of the world's largest energy companies and a leading innovator in renewable energy and smart energy technologies. That acquisition helped to form the basis of Enel X, a new business focused on developing value-added services for energy consumers.

In short, operating as Enel X provides us access to new resources, expertise, and capabilities to solve our customers' energy challenges.

To help provide more detail about those resources and capabilities—as well as what exactly the transition will mean for our customers and partners—we compiled answers to some frequently asked questions.
