1 I. Introduction

2 Q. What is your name and address?

3 A. My name is Timothy J. Tardiff. My business address is 112 Water Street, Boston, MA 4 02109. I submitted direct testimony in this matter on April 21, 2020 (“Tardiff Direct”).
5 My qualifications are described therein.

6 Q. Please summarize the conclusions in your Direct Testimony.

7 A. In my Direct Testimony, I concluded that the rental rates that FirstEnergy<sup>1</sup> has demanded 8 from Verizon Pennsylvania LLC and Verizon North LLC (“Verizon”) under the parties’ 9 joint use agreements are unjust and unreasonable.<sup>2</sup> FirstEnergy had not (and still has not) 10 provided clear and convincing evidence that the terms and conditions in the joint use 11 agreements provide Verizon a net material advantage relative to FirstEnergy’s third-party 12 license agreements as required to justify rates higher than the rate that results from a 13 proper application of the Commission’s new telecom rate formula. FirstEnergy’s 14 imposition and continued charging Verizon rental rates over [REDACTED] times the rates that 15 result from a proper application new telecom rate formula in spite of the Federal 16 Communications Commission’s (FCC) Orders and regulations adopted by the 17 Commission reflects FirstEnergy’s exercise of the superior bargaining power it possesses 18 as a result of its owning about 73 percent of the joint use poles in the service territories at 19 issue in this matter.

20 Q. Have you reviewed and evaluated FirstEnergy’s May 21, 2020 rebuttal testimonies 21 and associated discovery responses?

22 A. Yes.

<sup>2</sup> My affidavit in the FCC proceeding is Exhibit TJT-1 to my Direct Testimony. I refer to this as “Tardiff Opening Affidavit” in citations that appear below.

1 Q. What are the conclusions from your review and evaluation?

2 A. My review has confirmed and strengthened my prior conclusions, as detailed in this 3 surrebuttal testimony, which I describe in the following sections. Section II provides a 4 summary of my findings regarding (1) FirstEnergy’s distracting and unwarranted 5 assertions that the FCC’s pole attachment rate formulas, which this Commission has 6 adopted in assuming jurisdiction over pole attachment rates and disputes, are lower than 7 what “typical” rate methodologies would produce, and thus provide a subsidy to parties 8 attaching to FirstEnergy’s poles; (2) FirstEnergy’s exercise of superior bargaining power 9 in its efforts to keep annual rental rates well above just and reasonable levels; (3) 10 FirstEnergy’s failure to identify terms and conditions in the joint use agreements that 11 would justify rental rates higher than what it may lawfully charge cable companies and 12 competing telecommunications providers; and (4) FirstEnergy’s misplaced criticism of 13 Verizon’s proper calculation and application of the Commission’s adopted rental rate 14 formulas.

15 I provide further detail about each of these findings in Sections III through VII. Section 16 III responds to the erroneous claims of FirstEnergy’s witnesses that the Commission’s 17 adopted rate formulas produce pole attachment rates lower than what “typical” fully 18 allocated cost methodologies would produce, including the incorrect claims that (1) the 19 FCC’s new telecom rate, which is applicable absent clear and convincing evidence that 20 the joint use agreements are materially advantageous on a net basis relative to third-party 21 agreements, is a below cost rate that subsidizes attaching parties and (2) the new telecom 22 rate does not recover any costs associated with the unusable space.

23 Section IV provides a summary of my findings regarding FirstEnergy’s longstanding and 24 ongoing exercise of superior bargaining power in its efforts to keep annual rental rates 25 well above just and reasonable levels, its failure to identify terms and conditions that 26 would justify rental rates for Verizon higher than what it may lawfully charge cable 27 companies and competing telecommunications providers, and its unwarranted criticism of 28 Verizon’s proper calculation and application of the FCC’s rental rate formulas. Section 29 IV also responds in greater detail to FirstEnergy’s erroneous claim that it lacks superior 30 bargaining power, explaining, among other points, that FirstEnergy’s pole ownership, in 31 conjunction with its not offering meaningful negotiated rates approaching just and

1 reasonable levels, follows a pattern similar to those in which the FCC has found the 2 exercise of superior bargaining power in previous disputes.

3 Section V evaluates further FirstEnergy’s incorrect claim that the joint use agreements 4 provide Verizon with competitive advantages. Section VI responds to FirstEnergy’s 5 disagreement with Verizon’s appropriate calculation and application of the Commission’s 6 adopted FCC rate formulas. Finally, Section VII explains that FirstEnergy’s charging 7 certain third parties rental rates that greatly exceeds the FCC’s maximum rental rates 8 when by its own admission there are no terms that justify higher rates demonstrates 9 uneconomic price discrimination—an exercise of superior bargaining power that the 10 FCC’s pole attachment regulations have been explicitly designed to prevent.

11 II. Summary

12 Q. When the Commission decided to regulate pole attachments, did it adopt the FCC’s 13 pole attachment regulations?

14 A. Yes. The Commission described its action as a “turn-key adoption of the FCC’s pole 15 attachment regime.”<sup>3</sup>

16 Q. Please describe the specific FCC regulations the Commission adopted.

17 A. When the Commission decided to regulate pole attachments, it adopted FCC regulations, 18 including the FCC’s 2018 Third Report and Order,<sup>4</sup> which it called the “2018 FCC Poles 19 Order.” The 2018 Third Report and Order built on the FCC’s 2011 Pole Attachment 20 Order,<sup>5</sup> which provided a process for Incumbent Local Exchange Carriers (ILECs) to 21 obtain just and reasonable annual rental rates for attaching to poles owned by electric 22 utilities. In the 2011 Pole Attachment Order, the FCC ruled ILECs are entitled to just and <sup>5</sup> Implementation of Section 224 of the Act; A National Broadband Plan for Our Future, WC Docket No. 07-245; GN Docket No. 09-51, Report and Order and Order on Reconsideration, 26 FCC Rcd 5240 (“2011 Report and Order”).

1 reasonable rates and stated that it would set the rates on a case-by-case basis in pole
2 attachment complaint proceedings where an ILEC and electric utility are unable to agree 3 on the just and reasonable rate in a new agreement or where an ILEC is unable to obtain 4 relief from unjust and unreasonable rates in an existing agreement. In 2011, the FCC also 5 provided guidance to encourage the negotiation of “just and reasonable” rates. In 6 particular, the FCC established the parameters for evaluating whether the rates in dispute 7 were just and reasonable: if the terms and conditions (other than rental rates) in the 8 agreement under consideration were comparable to those in the electric utility’s 9 agreements with cable companies and competitive local exchange carriers (CLECs), the 10 just and reasonable rate for the ILEC would be the new telecom rate used to establish the 11 maximum rate for CLEC attachments (which approximates the cable rate used to 12 establish the maximum rate for cable companies providing cable services). Alternatively, 13 if the agreement between the electric utility and the ILEC provided the ILEC net material 14 benefits relative to its competitors, the higher “old” or “pre-existing” telecom rate would 15 be a reference point for the just and reasonable rate.

16 Q. Have ILECs been able to obtain the just and reasonable rates the FCC envisioned?

17 A. No. Notwithstanding the FCC’s 2011 Pole Attachment Order, electric utilities denied 18 ILECs the rate relief to which they were entitled and “continued to charge pole 19 attachment rates significantly higher than the rates charged similarly situated 20 telecommunications attachers.”<sup>6</sup> Consequently, in the 2018 Third Report and Order, the 21 FCC updated the 2011 standard to (among other things) (1) establish a rebuttable 22 presumption that the non-rate terms and conditions in “new and newly renewed” joint use 23 agreements and license agreements are sufficiently comparable so that the ILEC may not 24 be charged a rate higher than the new telecom rate, (2) require an electric utility that 25 seeks to rebut the presumption to provide clear and convincing evidence of net material 26 advantages provided the ILEC as compared to cable and CLEC attachers that would <sup>6</sup> 2018 Report and Order, ¶ 123. The failure to obtain just and reasonable rental rates through negotiations reflected, in part, the fact that since 2008, ILEC pole attachment rates have increased while third-party rates have decreased (¶ 123) and the multiple pole attachment complaints that have been filed at the FCC, including a complaint against FirstEnergy. See, e.g., Verizon Pennsylvania LLC and Verizon North LLC, Complainants v. Metropolitan Edison Company, Pennsylvania Power Company, and Pennsylvania Power Company, Defendants, Proceeding No. 19-354, Bureau ID No. EB-19-MD-008.

1 justify a rate higher than the new telecom rate, and (3) set the pre-existing telecom rate as 2 a hard cap, i.e., the maximum annual rental rate that an electric utility may lawfully 3 charge an ILEC based on the value of any net material competitive advantages it proves 4 and quantifies.

5 The FCC's rationale for taking these steps in 2018 included (1) the recognition that 6 economic access to utility poles is an essential input into the deployment of and 7 competition for broadband services, (2) data showing electric utilities continued to charge 8 ILECs unreasonably high rates averaging $26.12 per pole per year,<sup>7</sup> as well as (3) a 9 concern that electric utilities have superior bargaining power by virtue of their ownership 10 of far more utility poles, which could prevent ILECs from eliminating outdated rates and 11 from negotiating new just and reasonable rates.

12 Q. What guidance do the FCC's orders provide for evaluating the pole attachment 13 rates at issue in this proceeding?

14 A. The FCC's 2011 and 2018 Orders, as well as decisions in FCC pole attachment complaint 15 proceedings brought by ILECs against electric utilities, provide a framework for 16 reviewing the rates FirstEnergy charges Verizon under the joint use agreements. Under 17 this framework, I have identified three major economic issues regarding the rates in the 18 joint use agreements between Verizon and FirstEnergy that lead me to conclude the rates 19 FirstEnergy charges Verizon are not just and reasonable: (1) FirstEnergy has superior 20 bargaining power, which when exercised, results in Verizon paying rates above an 21 economic and just and reasonable level, (2) FirstEnergy's claim that the substantially 22 higher rates FirstEnergy charges Verizon are justified by the terms in the joint use 23 agreements favor Verizon is incorrect, and (3) while there is some disagreement over 24 specific inputs to the FCC's new telecom formulas, both Verizon and FirstEnergy present 25 new telecom rates on the order of one-third of those in the current joint use agreements.

26 Q. Why did you conclude that FirstEnergy had exercised superior bargaining power?

27 A. The facts contradict FirstEnergy's claim that it lacks superior bargaining power and that, 28 as a result, the rates it has demanded from Verizon are just and reasonable. In particular,

1 (1) FirstEnergy’s ownership of three-quarters of the joint use poles provides FirstEnergy 2 the ability to exercise superior bargaining power, (2) the demanded rates indicate an 3 exercise of superior bargaining power because they impose a disproportionate share of 4 the costs of every joint use pole on Verizon, and as a result are [REDACTED] multiples of the 5 maximum rate FirstEnergy may lawfully charge third party cable and CLEC attachers, 6 and (3) FirstEnergy’s negotiations over several years confirm its superior bargaining 7 power because it failed to move its rate offer within striking distance of just and 8 reasonable rates—which signifies that negotiations with FirstEnergy have not produced, 9 and were not able to produce, just and reasonable rates.

10 Q. What is the significance of FirstEnergy’s owning three-quarters of the joint use 11 poles?

12 A. Absent regulatory intervention, this imbalance in ownership allows FirstEnergy to secure 13 and maintain monopoly pole rents from Verizon by virtue of the bargaining power it 14 confers. Indeed, FirstEnergy’s three-to-one pole ownership is well above the level the 15 FCC’s orders established was sufficient to confer superior bargaining power when it 16 determined that ILECs are entitled to just and reasonable rates. Such an imbalance is an 17 indicator that alternatives to the current joint use agreement (if they exit at all) are 18 materially more costly for Verizon than for FirstEnergy, which is the essence of superior 19 bargaining power.<sup>8</sup>

20 Q. Turning to the second economic issue, why are rates multiples of what FirstEnergy 21 charges Verizon’s competitors problematic?

22 While competitive neutrality among attaching parties can, in principle, justify charging a 23 higher rate to a party enjoying more favorable terms, the facts contradict FirstEnergy’s 24 claim that an annual rental rate for Verizon’s attachments higher than that charged to 25 Verizon’s competitors—cable companies and CLECs—is economic and otherwise just 26 and reasonable. The FCC’s framework (adopted by the Commission) asks the question 27 of whether cable companies and CLECs pay an electric utility for items addressed in the 28 non-annual rental rate terms of their license agreements that Verizon also requires of the

1 electric utility but does not pay it for. This inquiry requires an assessment of whether 2 FirstEnergy charges Verizon's competitors for work it also performs to accommodate 3 Verizon's attachments but for which Verizon does not pay in any of the ways Verizon 4 incurs costs for work, which include (1) with a cash payment to FirstEnergy, (2) by 5 performing the work and incurring the cost itself, and/or (3) by performing similar work
6 at its own cost to accommodate FirstEnergy's attachments to Verizon's poles.<sup>9</sup> 7 FirstEnergy's claims regarding the existence and magnitude of alleged advantages 8 provided in the current joint use agreements relative to third-party license agreements are 9 not only unsupported, but include fundamental defects the FCC has rejected in similar 10 attempts to justify charging ILECs higher rental rates, including (1) a failure to recognize 11 that Verizon performs at its own cost some of the activities that FirstEnergy performs for 12 third parties, (2) the use of incorrect statistics to produce unrepresentative and 13 unrealistically high amounts for any one-time charges associated with installing new 14 attachments, and (3) an overstatement of the frequency of any such one-time charges.

15 Q. Turning to your third economic issue, what is the significance of Verizon and 16 FirstEnergy calculating new telecom rental rates well below the rates in the current 17 joint use agreements?

18 A. The fact that there are relatively minor differences between the parties' proposed new 19 telecom rental rates, especially when viewed from the perspective of the rental rates in 20 the current agreements, further illustrates the unreasonableness of the latter rates. Despite 21 FirstEnergy's claim that Verizon's Complaint presented incorrect annual rental rates 22 produced by the FCC's new telecom formula, the new telecom rates calculated by 23 FirstEnergy are very close to the rates Verizon properly calculated, providing additional

---

<sup>9</sup> For example, suppose installing new attachments on FirstEnergy's poles required FirstEnergy to undertake one-time activities that cost $100 per pole. In this example, assume that all of FirstEnergy's third-party agreements include a $100 charge for these activities, while the agreements with Verizon do not. Also assume Verizon does not incur the same $100 per pole cost when FirstEnergy installs new attachments on Verizon's poles. In this example, if the FirstEnergy poles needing new attachments accounted for one percent of the poles to which Verizon is attached, then a $100 one-time charge would be the same as a $1 increase to an annual per pole rental rate for that year. To illustrate, assume Verizon had attachments to 1,000 FirstEnergy poles and FirstEnergy charged third parties $10 per pole per year. If Verizon paid $11 per pole for one year, Verizon would pay FirstEnergy $11,000 ($11 x 1,000). But Verizon would also pay $11,000 if Verizon paid $10 per pole for its attachments to 1,000 FirstEnergy poles plus a one-time charge of $100 for the 10 poles with new attachments (one percent of 1,000 in this example) (($10 x 1,000) + ($100 x 10)).

1 evidence that the rates FirstEnergy has charged and continues to charge Verizon are well 2 above a just and reasonable level. As an example, with the exception of Penn Power, for 3 which FirstEnergy used an outdated unreasonably higher rate of return, the new telecom 4 rates FirstEnergy calculated based on 2018 cost data differ slightly from the rates Verizon 5 calculated using the same cost data, but FirstEnergy charged Verizon rates that are 6 multiples of the new telecom rate it calculated.<sup>10</sup>

7 Q. Despite the similarity in rental rates, Mr. Schafer claims that Verizon’s proposed 8 new telecom rental rates are based on incorrect inputs. Does this criticism 9 invalidate Verizon’s proposed new telecom rates?

10 A. No. Mr. Schafer is incorrect about input selection. In addition, some inputs at issue were 11 not available when Verizon developed the rates presented in the Direct Testimonies, 12 because Mr. Schafer’s proposed inputs are based on data FirstEnergy declined to disclose 13 or substantiate before Verizon filed its pole attachment complaint at the FCC or during 14 the pendency of that proceeding. For example, some differences in resulting rates are 15 based on values for the total number of FirstEnergy’s distribution poles, which were first 16 provided to Verizon during discovery during this complaint proceeding. Other 17 differences are based on Mr. Schafer’s use of results from an erroneous and inadequately 18 documented field review of about [REDACTED] FirstEnergy poles ([REDACTED] total poles)<sup>11</sup> 19 conducted earlier this year in place of default inputs to the FCC’s rate formula. This data 20 should not be used to calculate rates for rental years that pre-date its collection. It is also 21 apparent from FirstEnergy’s description of the field review and data provided in response 22 to Verizon’s discovery requests that the results of the field review are flawed and 23 unreliable and should not be used to determine rental rates. For example, FirstEnergy’s

<sup>11</sup> The number of poles in the field review is not clear because of unexplained inconsistent pole counts across FirstEnergy’s documents. FirstEnergy’s contractor Precision Consulting stated [REDACTED]. Guo Rebuttal, Exhibit CG-1, Table 2. FirstEnergy’s contractor Davey Resource Group defined the scope in accordance with this “@95%” recommendation, but stated 1,519 Verizon-owned poles and 1,519 FirstEnergy-owned poles would be in the scope of the project. Carlin Rebuttal, Exhibit SC-1, p. FE00134. Precision Consulting then provided results for, at most, [REDACTED] FirstEnergy poles and [REDACTED] Verizon poles. Guo Rebuttal, Exhibit CG-1, Tables 3, 4.

1 contractor collected data regarding poles that are not jointly used by FirstEnergy and 2 Verizon, rendering the averages Mr. Schafer proposes to use in rate calculations suspect.

3 Q. Has FirstEnergy offered another rationale for maintaining rates well in excess of 4 what its own calculations produce?

5 A. Yes. FirstEnergy’s FCC Answer claims that, despite the rates Mr. Schafer calculates 6 under the new telecom formula, and although its agreements with cable companies and 7 CLECs have nearly identical terms and conditions as the joint use agreements with 8 Verizon, FirstEnergy would be justified in charging Verizon rates several multiples of the 9 new telecom rate because it is charging some CLECs rates well above the maximum rate 10 permitted by law. Not only does this admission evidence FirstEnergy’s exercise of 11 superior bargaining power over the affected CLECs, but it validates this Commission’s 12 and the FCC’s work to ensure just and reasonable rates. FirstEnergy’s decision to charge 13 widely disparate rates for admittedly the same service is price discrimination, which in 14 the case of utility poles—an essential input for the provision of broadband services—15 distorts efficient competition for broadband services.

16 III. FirstEnergy’s Erroneous Claim that the FCC’s Rate Formulas Produce 17 Rates Lower than “Typical” Rate Methodologies

18 Q. Do the Commission’s adopted FCC rate formulas produce below-cost rental rates?

19 A. No. The claim by several FirstEnergy’s witnesses that the rental rates for use of 20 FirstEnergy’s poles produced by the FCC’s formulas are lower than fully allocated costs 21 is not correct.<sup>12</sup> All of the FCC’s rental rates—cable rate, old telecom rate, and new 22 telecom rate—charge for more electric utility pole space than required for attachments.<sup>13</sup> 23 That is, FCC rates charge for space actually occupied, plus some amount of unusable

---

<sup>12</sup> Rebuttal Testimonies of William P. Zarakas, Stephen F. Schafer, and Joanne M. Savage. See for example, Zarakas Rebuttal, p. 6: “However, the pole attachment rates produced under the telecom rate formula were nonetheless less than the rates that would have been produced under a fully allocated cost methodology,” when claiming that even the old telecom formula produces costs lower than fully allocated costs.

<sup>13</sup> For example, as illustrated in the discussion and example below, the new telecom rate and cable rates are equivalent to charging attachers for 2.78 feet (7.4 percent of the 37.5-foot presumptive pole) for the presumptive one foot of space occupied.

1 space.<sup>14</sup> This means FCC rates do recover some of the cost of unusable space and the 2 amount of that recovery adopted by the Commission and detailed in the FCC’s 2011
3 Report and Order and 2018 Third Report and Order is proper. FirstEnergy’s witnesses’ 4 arguments to the contrary are an attempt to use this complaint proceeding to reverse
5 course on the Commission’s turn-key adoption of the FCC’s well-established pole 6 attachment formulas found fully compensatory by the courts.<sup>15</sup>

7 For example, Mr. Zarakas cites the FCC’s 2011 Pole Attachment Order to support his 8 claim that the old telecom rate (and by implication, the cable rate and the new telecom 9 rate) produce rates lower than fully allocated costs. To the contrary. The FCC discussion 10 Mr. Zarakas cites clearly states that both the cable rate (which is about the same as the 11 new telecom rate) and the old telecom rate are the result of fully allocated cost 12 approaches.<sup>16</sup>

13 Q. Is the claim of FirstEnergy’s witnesses that the Commission’s adopted FCC pole 14 attachment rate formulas depart from “typical” fully allocated cost approaches 15 correct?

16 A. No. Their claim seems to be that a “proper” fully allocated cost methodology is one that 17 assigns their preferred disproportionate amount of common costs to Verizon (and 18 presumably other communications providers attaching to FirstEnergy’s poles). For 19 example, Mr. Zarakas qualifies his criticism by stating the FCC’s formulas produce rates 20 lower the rates produced by “fully allocated cost methodology that is typically used in

---

<sup>14</sup> Thus, Mr. Zarakas is incorrect in stating that electric utility ratepayers subsidize cable and CLEC broadband companies. Zarakas Rebuttal, p. 20. In fact, it is FirstEnergy’s attachments that receive a subsidy under the FCC’s new telecom formula. With the default inputs of a 37.5-foot pole, 24 feet of unusable space, 5 attaching entities, and 10.5 feet of space needed for FirstEnergy’s attachments, the FCC’s formula allocates 24 percent of annual pole cost (net cost of a bare pole times carrying charge rate) to FirstEnergy’s rental rate, while FirstEnergy’s attachments occupy 28 percent (10.5/37.5) of pole space. Calnon Direct, Exhibit MSC-1, p. VZ00100.

<sup>16</sup> 2011 Report and Order, ¶¶ 156-157. Since the FCC designed the new telecom rate to be virtually the same as the cable rate, it recovers essentially the costs of essentially the same amount of occupied and unusable space as does the cable rate as a matter of arithmetic. In economic terms, rates in the FCC’s range are not being subsidized, because they produce revenue that more than covers the cost of providing the required space. See, for example, William J. Baumol, Superfairness, Cambridge: MIT Press, 1986, p. 132 and David W. Price, editor, The MIT Dictionary of Modern Economics, Fourth Edition, Cambridge: MIT Press, 1992, p. 92.

1 utility ratemaking matters,”<sup>17</sup> but he never defines what that “typical methodology” is.
2 Mr. Schafer presents results based on a methodology that assigns a greater (and 3 uneconomic) share of the cost of unusable space to entities attaching to its poles than 4 does the highest of the FCC rates (the old telecom rate),<sup>18</sup> but provides no support for 5 why such an assignment is reasonable, let alone “typical.” In light of the facts that the 6 majority of states have not pre-empted the FCC’s jurisdiction over pole attachments and 7 some of those that have (including Pennsylvania) have adopted the FCC’s formulas, Mr.
8 Schafer’s unsupported proposed rate methodology is far from typical.

9 Q. Do the FCC’s new telecom and cable rates contribute to the common costs 10 (unusable space) on a pole?

11 A. Absolutely, notwithstanding the incorrect claim of FirstEnergy’s witnesses that the 12 FCC’s cable rate (and by implication the new telecom rate, which was designed to 13 produce rates virtually the same as the cable rate) provides “no contribution to the costs 14 associated with the unusable portion of the pole.”<sup>19</sup> To the contrary, attachers charged 15 the cable rate pay for the space they occupy, plus an additional amount that is 16 proportional to their share of the usable space they occupy.<sup>20</sup> For example, the FCC’s 17 default assumptions specify that unusable space accounts for 24 feet of a 37.5-foot pole.
18 With default inputs, the cable rate is 7.4 percent (1 foot /13.5 feet of usable space) of the 19 cost of a 37.5-foot pole. This result is equivalent to charging for 2.78 feet of space (37.5 20 x 0.074)—1 foot occupied and 1.78 feet of unusable space. This means the cable rate is

<sup>18</sup> Under the FCC’s default assumptions, a 37.5-foot pole provides 13.5 feet of space suitable for pole attachments (“usable space”), with the rest of the pole buried or providing clearance for traffic and the like (“unusable space”). The old telecom rate assigns an attaching party paying that rates an amount based on the space it occupies plus an equal allocation two-thirds of unusable space (based on the number of attachers, including the pole owner), while Mr. Schafer’s calculations allocate all of the unusable space equally among attachers and pole owner.

<sup>20</sup> This property of the cable rate (and by implication the new telecom rate) is consistent with the FCC’s guidance in the 2011 Report and Order (¶ 218, note 662) that “a just and reasonable rate in such circumstances would be the same proportionate rate charged the electric utility, given the incumbent LEC’s relative usage of the pole (such as the same rate per foot of occupied space).”

1 178 percent higher ((2.78 feet - 1 foot) / 1 foot) than it would be if there were no 2 contribution to unusable space cost recovery.<sup>21</sup>

3 Q. Please provide an example of how Mr. Schafer’s proposed rate methodology would 4 assign disproportionate amounts of common cost to Verizon (and possibly other 5 communications companies).

6 A. The following example compares the assignment of the cost of unusable space under the 7 FCC’s cable, old telecom, and new telecom rates, as well as under Mr. Schafer’s 8 proposed methodology, which he refers to as producing “Fully Allocated Pre-2011” rates.
9 The example uses the FCC’s default inputs for poles in an urbanized area with a 10 hypothetical average pole cost of $150 per year (so the cost per foot is $4 when paired 11 with the default pole height of 37.5 feet [ $$4 \text{ per foot} = ($150/37.5 \text{ feet})$ ]).<sup>22</sup> Under the 12 default inputs, the pole has five attaching entities (including the electric company), the 13 electric company’s attachments require 10.5 feet, and the ILEC and three other 14 communications companies occupy one foot of space each.

15 Q. What does your example show?

16 A. Table 1 includes the results from the example, which show how Mr. Schafer seeks to 17 improperly shift costs from FirstEnergy to attaching entities. The basic idea of the 18 example is that a particular attacher pays for the space it occupies plus some amount of 19 the unusable space. For example, an attacher that was charged $8 per year for occupying 20 one foot of the hypothetical 37.5 foot pole with a $150 annual cost would be paying $4

<sup>21</sup> The Pennsylvania Order that assumed jurisdiction over pole attachments characterized pole attachments as “network elements upon which all broadband deployment relies—essential physical infrastructure used to deliver these services to end-user consumers.” 2019 Pennsylvania Pole Order, pp.1-2. While there are differences between how the adopted rate formulas price these elements and other network elements subject to the total element long-run incremental cost (TELRIC) methodology, there are some instructive insights from the FCC’s discussion of TELRIC. In particular, the unusable space on a pole is similar to certain network elements requiring more capacity than is actually used, e.g., to accommodate anticipated growth. TELRIC assigns such unused capacity in proportion to capacity actually used in the rates charged to users of network elements, i.e., in essentially the same way that the cable formula includes the cost of unusable space. Implementation of the Local Competition Provisions of the Telecommunications Act of 1996 ;Interconnection between Local Exchange Carriers and Commercial Mobile Radio Service Providers, CC Docket No. 96-98; CC Docket No. 95-185, First Report and Order, 11 FCC Rcd 15499, ¶ 794.

<sup>22</sup> Therefore, the total footage of space for which an attacher pays is the rate charged divided by $4. This approach does not depend on the hypothetical $150 annual pole cost, which was chosen as a simplification that closely approximates the FirstEnergy’s weighted average annual pole cost produced by 2018 FERC Form 1 data. Calnon Direct, Exhibit MSC-1, p. VZ00067, VZ00077, and VZ00087 and FirstEnergy’s response to Verizon’s Set III, Interrogatory No. 21, Attachments B, C, and D (Year-End 2018 Rates) (Exhibits MSC-8, MSC-9, MSC-10).

1 for the one-foot of space it occupies plus an additional $4 for unusable space.
2 Equivalently, an $8 per pole rental rate covers 2 feet of the hypothetical 37.5-foot pole, or 3 5.3 percent (2 feet / 37.5 feet). Thus, the amount of unusable space paid for in the 4 hypothetical $8 rate is the same amount (100 percent) as the 1 foot of space actually 5 occupied. Equivalently, the rate is twice what it would be if the attached paid for only 6 the space it occupied.

7 Q. Please describe Table 1.

8 A. The top part of the table lists the characteristics of the hypothetical joint use pole and the 9 next four blocks show the outcomes from the FCC's cable rate, old telecom rate, and new 10 telecom rate formulas, and Mr. Schafer's version of fully allocated cost. Under the cable 11 rate (first block), the ILEC and third party communications companies pay $11.11 per 12 pole in this example,<sup>23</sup> which is equivalent to paying for one-foot of space occupied by 13 their attachments plus an additional 1.78 feet (2.78 feet – 1 foot) of unusable space. (At a 14 $4 per foot hypothetical rate ($150 pole cost / 37.5 feet), 2.78 feet produces the $11.11 15 per pole rate calculated under the cable rate formula.) The amount of unusable 16 (common) space paid for by each ILEC and third party communications companies under 17 this example is 178 percent more than the amount associated with the one-foot of space it 18 occupies. In this example, the electric company pole owner would implicitly bear 19 $105.56 of the annual pole cost ($150 pole cost – (4 communications attachers x $11.11 20 per pole rate)), which is equivalent to paying $4 per foot for 26.9 feet ($105.56/$4 for the 21 10.5 feet of space it occupies plus 15.9 feet of unusable (common) space). The electric 22 utility actually pays somewhat less for common space as a proportion of the amount of 23 space it requires.

<sup>23</sup>  $$11.11 = $150 \times 1/13.5$ , where $150 is the annual pole cost, 1 foot is the amount of space required for these attachments, and 13.5 is the total amount of usable space. Consistent with the competitive neutrality objective, the example assumes that ILECs and third parties would pay the same rate if they occupied the same amount of pole space. It is not clear whether Mr. Schafer is proposing to eventually charge third parties a rate higher than the new telecom rate. If FirstEnergy is proposing to charge only Verizon a higher rate, competitive neutrality would be sacrificed and FirstEnergy would implicitly pay for a somewhat higher amount of the unusable space.

3 Q. What do the second and third blocks of Table 1 show?

4 A. The second block present the results of the example for the old telecom formula, which 5 assigns two thirds of unusable space equally to the five attachers, resulting in a per pole
 6 rental rate of $16.80. At $4 per foot, this translates into a total space assignment of 4.2

1 feet ($16.80/$4 for the 1 foot occupied plus 3.2 feet (24 feet x (2/3) / 5 attachers) of 2 common space. Thus, while the ILECs and third parties would be charged 4.2 times as 3 much as they would be charged for occupied space alone, the electric company's implicit 4 rate pays for a little less than double its required space (10.5 feet occupied compared to 5 20.7 feet paid for). The third block presents the results for the new telecom formula, 6 which by design is nearly identical to the cable rate results in the first block.

7 Q. Please describe how much attaching parties would pay for unusable space under 8 Mr. Schafer's "Fully Allocated Pre-2011" rate methodology.

9 A. Mr. Schafer's (fourth block) methodology assigns the full amount of unusable space 10 equally to the five attachers, resulting in 5.8 feet of assigned space to each 11 communications attacher (1 foot occupied + 24 feet unusable space / 5 attachers), 12 producing a rate of $23.20 per pole for each communications attacher under this example.
13 In contrast, FirstEnergy would effectively pay $57.20 per pole under this example, which 14 is 2.5 times the rate charged each ILEC and third party communications company, 15 despite the fact that FirstEnergy occupies over 10 times the amount of usable space as 16 each communications company (including the ILEC).<sup>24</sup>

17 IV. FirstEnergy Used its Superior Bargaining Power to Secure Unjust and 18 Unreasonable Rental Rates

19 Q. Does FirstEnergy possess and has it exercised superior bargaining power with 20 respect to pole attachment rental rates?

21 A. Yes. FirstEnergy witnesses offer a number of erroneous and/or unsupported arguments 22 for the claim that the rental rates it has continued to demand of Verizon are just and 23 reasonable because FirstEnergy claims it does not have bargaining power that is superior 24 to Verizon's. Contrary to these allegations, (1) FirstEnergy's ownership of almost three-

---

<sup>24</sup> If Mr. Schafer envisions that Verizon would pay his version of a fully allocated cost-based rental rate, but third-parties would pay the FCC's new telecom rate, then FirstEnergy would implicitly pay $93.54 per pole for the hypothetical pole, which is equivalent to 23.38 feet of usable and unusable space. The 12.88 feet of unusable space (in addition to the 10.5 feet required for FirstEnergy's attachment) would represent paying for 2.23 times what it would pay for its occupied space alone, a lower multiple than charged third party communications companies under the FCC's new telecom rate formula (2.77) and much lower than the [REDACTED] multiple Verizon would face under Mr. Schafer's rate methodology.

1           quarters of the joint use poles, in combination with its not negotiating reductions in rental 2           rates (and net rental payments) sufficient to close the wide gap between the current rates
3           and just and reasonable rates (including FirstEnergy’s tying an offer to discuss rate parity 4           with third parties if Verizon transferred its poles to FirstEnergy) closely parallels the 5           pattern that the FCC has found to demonstrate superior bargaining power and (2) 6           FirstEnergy’s claim that both parties lack superior bargaining power because neither 7           could economically replace the other’s joint use poles is fundamentally a request to 8           perpetuate the status quo of rental rates that substantially favors FirstEnergy to the 9           detriment of Verizon, third parties, and consumers who benefit from the efficient 10          deployment of broadband.

11 Q.    How do you respond to the specific arguments upon which FirstEnergy’s witnesses 12 base their lack of superior bargaining power claim?

13 A.    Messrs. Zarakas<sup>25</sup>, Colman<sup>26</sup>, and Pryatel<sup>27</sup> attempt to support FirstEnergy’s erroneous 14          claim that it lacks superior bargaining power over Verizon, but their arguments lack 15          merit. Mr. Zarakas’ main arguments are (1) Verizon’s analysis of bargaining power was 16          based on a cursory review of relative pole ownership levels,<sup>28</sup> (2) FirstEnergy’s allegation 17          that Verizon rejected (or failed to sufficiently consider) an offer that required Verizon to 18          transfer its poles to FirstEnergy is inconsistent with FirstEnergy possessing superior 19          bargaining power,<sup>29</sup> (3) since imbalanced pole ownership levels between the parties have 20          been stable, bargaining power was not a factor in the negotiations that led to the 2009
21          rates Met-Ed and Penelec charge and which are at issue in this proceeding,<sup>30</sup> and (4) it 22          would be prohibitively expensive for FirstEnergy to replace the Verizon poles to which

2 FirstEnergy’s superior bargaining power as Mr. Zarakas concludes.<sup>32</sup>

3 Q. What is the proper interpretation of the imbalance in FirstEnergy’s and Verizon’s 4 ownership of joint use poles?

5 A. Contrary to Mr. Zarakas’ characterization that Verizon’s discussion of bargaining power 6 only focused on ownership levels, Verizon’s analysis of bargaining power closely 7 paralleled the FCC’s analysis of the electric utility’s bargaining power in a prior pole 8 attachment complaint proceeding. In the Verizon v. Dominion proceeding, the 9 combination of Dominion’s ownership of two-thirds of the joint use poles and Verizon’s 10 lack of success in negotiating meaningful rate reductions were the bases for the FCC’s 11 determination that Dominion had and had exercised its superior bargaining power in 12 obtaining the rental rates at issue.<sup>33</sup> The Direct Testimonies of Verizon’s witnesses 13 described similar conditions. FirstEnergy owns an even higher share of joint use poles 14 (three of four) than did Dominion (two of three) and more than seven years of 15 negotiations failed to produce an offer for more than very modest reductions of the net
16 rental payment FirstEnergy would accept from Verizon.<sup>34</sup>

The FCC’s Enforcement Bureau subsequently found a lack of bargaining power in a case where the ILEC owns 34% of the joint use poles and its “efforts to negotiate new rates have failed.” See BellSouth Telecommunication, LLC dba AT&T Florida v. Florida Power and Light Company, Proceeding No. 19-187, Bureau ID No. EB-19-MD-006, Order, May 20, 2020, ¶ 18 (“FPL Order”). Mr. Zarakas submitted affidavits on behalf of Dominion and FPL in each of these proceedings (Zarakas Rebuttal, Attachment A, pp. 4 and 6), but he does not include the FCC’s findings on bargaining power in his overview of FCC pole attachment regulation.

<sup>34</sup> Mills Direct, Exhibit SCM-1, Exhibit A, ¶¶ 30-47. Mr. Schafer stated that FirstEnergy offered to reduce rates in Pennsylvania and Maryland by more than [REDACTED] per year (Schafer Rebuttal, p. 27). To put this amount in perspective, Verizon’s net payments to FirstEnergy for 2018, which are currently about [REDACTED] per year when Pennsylvania and Maryland payments are combined, would fall to about [REDACTED] under the new telecom rates calculated by Verizon Tardiff Opening Affidavit, Table 1) and to about [REDACTED] under the pre-existing telecom rates. Thus, the reduction Mr. Schafer reports would leave net payments at about [REDACTED] per year—[REDACTED] times the level under just and reasonable rates and [REDACTED] times the level produced by the pre-existing telecom rate.

1 Q. Does Verizon’s not agreeing to a suggestion that it could lower its rental rates by 2 transitioning out of joint-pole ownership show that FirstEnergy lacks superior 3 bargaining power?

4 A. No. Mr. Zarakas provided no support for his claim that FirstEnergy’s “transition[ing] 5 Verizon out of the pole owning business in FirstEnergy service territories” and then 6 offering Verizon an agreement comparable to third-party agreements would result in 7 costs lower than under current joint use rates, nor did he provide any estimate of whether 8 or how such an arrangement would produce savings for Verizon. Evaluating an offer that 9 Verizon transition ownership of its poles to FirstEnergy as a condition for merely 10 discussing reducing the contract rates to the new telecom rate<sup>35</sup> requires information on 11 the specific details of the transition being offered,<sup>36</sup> including the timetable for transfer,<sup>37</sup> 12 the cost of the poles and the precise rental rates FirstEnergy would, in fact, charge

---

<sup>35</sup> As explained by Mr. Schafer, it does not appear that FirstEnergy intended to pay for Verizon’s poles, but instead to take ownership each time a pole required a replacement. Schafer Rebuttal, pp. 28-29; see also Exhibit SFS-3 to Mr. Schafer’s Rebuttal (Email from S. Schafer to J. Slavin (May 2, 2018)) (suggesting to “transition Verizon out of the pole-owning business” “[i]nstead of FirstEnergy buying all of Verizon’s poles”). Further, transferring poles, and then paying annual attachment rents based on a license agreement would place Verizon in an inferior position relative to its competitors, which are entitled to mandatory access to FirstEnergy’s poles under 47 C.F.R. § 224(f), while Verizon’s access is voluntary.

<sup>37</sup> The May 2, 2018 email from Mr. Schafer to Mr. Slavin describes Verizon “eventually transition[ing]...out of the pole-owning business.” Left unsaid is how long the transition would take (which could be a considerable number of decades, depending on the rate at which Verizon’s poles need replacing, which as explained in the previous note, may be exceedingly slow), what rates would be charged to Verizon for attachments to existing and transitioned poles in the meantime, and what rate FirstEnergy would offer Verizon when the transition was completed. Mr. Zarakas (p. 30) states: “Mr. Schafer also represented that FirstEnergy made the idea of its proposal clear to Verizon, including on a conference call in July 2019.” Mr. Schafer’s characterization of that call—“FirstEnergy finally broached the subject during a conference call with Verizon in July 2019, and Verizon said it would think about it and get back to the Companies”—indicates that FirstEnergy had not provided information sufficient to evaluate the offer. “Broaching a subject” does not provide the specific details on whether and to what extent such a transition would be an improvement over the current joint use agreements, and FirstEnergy has still offered no information on the degree to which (if any) Verizon would be better off over the time required for the transition from a starting point with rates approximately three times as high as rates charged to third parties under the FCC’s rate formulas.

1 Verizon.<sup>38</sup> When FirstEnergy raised the suggestion of a pole ownership transition, it also 2 insisted that any new rate require Verizon to pay for 3 feet of space on a pole.<sup>39</sup> 3 FirstEnergy now admits it should not calculate new telecom rates for Verizon that assign 4 3 feet of space because there is no data showing Verizon uses 3 feet of space on 5 FirstEnergy's poles.<sup>40</sup> FirstEnergy's statement that it would discuss a new telecom rate, 6 therefore, was not the same as agreeing to discuss the properly calculated new telecom
7 rate required by law. This is further confirmed by FirstEnergy's FCC Answer in which it 8 states that it successfully imposed rates far higher than the properly calculated new 9 telecom rate (rates as high as [REDACTED] per pole for the 2019 rental year) on certain CLECs 10 even though they are entitled by statute and regulation to a properly calculated new 11 telecom rate.<sup>41</sup> FirstEnergy's offer, therefore, did not guarantee Verizon properly 12 calculated new telecom rates, compensation for Verizon's poles that would be 13 transferred, or any recurring net savings for Verizon. It would, however, ensure 14 FirstEnergy had additional pole assets, even greater leverage over Verizon, and additional 15 rental revenue from the third parties attached to Verizon's poles. Because FirstEnergy 16 charges higher rates to attach to its poles than does Verizon – in some cases almost 10 17 times the rate Verizon charges – all attachers in Pennsylvania would suffer. For example, 18 in 2019, FirstEnergy charged Verizon's competitors rates as high as [REDACTED] per pole 19 compared to the [REDACTED] per pole annual rental rates Verizon charged CLECs and 20 cable companies.<sup>42</sup> Thus, transferring ownership of Verizon's poles as Mr. Schafer 21 suggested would have not only left Verizon completely captive to FirstEnergy but also 22 increased exponentially the rates paid by some of Verizon's competitors. FirstEnergy

2 pole transition.

3 Q. Does Verizon's agreement to the current rental rates in 2009 indicate that 4 FirstEnergy has not exercised superior bargaining power?

5 A. No. The fact that Verizon agreed in 2009 to Met-Ed's and Penelec's current rates does 6 not establish that those rates are free from the exercise of superior bargaining power. On 7 the contrary, the fact that Verizon was not able to negotiate rate reductions in 2009
8 confirms that the rates were the result of FirstEnergy's exercise of its superior bargaining 9 power. Moreover, the record shows Verizon agreed to the 2009 amendments to achieve 10 the efficiencies associated with a common rate structure for each operating company and 11 because it understood FirstEnergy would sell Verizon poles, which would reduce 12 Verizon's annual net rental payment and address the pole ownership disparity going 13 forward.<sup>43</sup> FirstEnergy does not dispute that it refused to sell Verizon poles.<sup>44</sup> And, in 14 any event, the fact that Verizon accepted previously-negotiated rates in the Dominion 15 matter, and that AT&T accepted previously-negotiated rates in the FPL matter, did not 16 persuade the FCC that they were just and reasonable. To the contrary, the fact that 17 Verizon was unable to obtain meaningful rate reductions through negotiations was a 18 major reason why the FCC determined that Verizon was in an inferior bargaining 19 position.

20 Q. Is the expense of installing new poles in place of joint use poles relevant to 21 evaluating the extent of FirstEnergy's superior bargaining power?

22 A. No. Regardless of how expensive it would be for FirstEnergy to install new poles in 23 place of Verizon's joint use poles, Verizon would need to install three times the poles in 24 place of FirstEnergy's joint use poles. Moreover, FirstEnergy's utility pole infrastructure 25 is an essential input for broadband deployment and competition, which in turn is 26 facilitated by just and reasonable rates for both Verizon and its competitors. Mr. Zarakas

---

<sup>43</sup> Mills Surrebuttal, pp. 37-39. In 2009, this was the only way Verizon could lower its net rental payment to FirstEnergy, because the FCC had not then determined that ILECs were entitled to just and reasonable rates under the U.S.C. § 224(b)(1)..

1 claims that FirstEnergy lacks superior bargaining power because finding replacement
2 infrastructure for facilities attached to Verizon’s joint use poles would be prohibitively
3 expensive for FirstEnergy.<sup>45</sup> In fact, the claim that both parties’ lack bargaining power
4 suggests that, left to its own devices, FirstEnergy would never negotiate an agreement 5 that moved rates towards the FCC’s just and reasonable range.

6 Taken to its logical conclusion, Mr. Zarakas’ equating of bargaining power with the 7 opportunity to discuss an alternative to an existing agreement would render the FCC’s 8 and this Commission’s determination that ILECs are entitled to just and reasonable rates 9 completely meaningless. Regardless of whether the rates in that theoretically possible 10 agreement are reasonable, this definition of “lack of bargaining power” would preclude 11 an evaluation of rates being demanded, and there would be no recourse under the FCC’s 12 guidance to dispute a refusal to negotiate seriously towards reasonable rates. In other 13 words, the status quo would prevail and the status quo vis-a-vis rental rates substantially 14 favors FirstEnergy to the detriment of efficient deployment of broadband.

15 Q. Please elaborate.

16 A. The FCC explained that its decision to evaluate whether pole attachment rates charged to 17 ILECs were just and reasonable was based on two considerations: (1) that pole ownership 18 proportions were or had shifted to a degree that may have placed ILECs in an inferior 19 bargaining position<sup>46</sup> and (2) reducing rates for ILEC pole attachments would promote

<sup>45</sup> Mr. Zarakas makes a somewhat similar argument with respect to evergreen provisions: because FirstEnergy cannot remove Verizon’s attachments, he asserts FirstEnergy cannot exercise whatever bargaining power it has (Zarakas Rebuttal, p. 26). However, when superior bargaining power has been previously exercised, as reflected in rates well in excess of just and reasonable level, “evergreen provisions have been used to perpetuate the imbalance in rental payments and are an important contributor to Verizon’s inability to terminate existing rental rate provisions and secure new just and reasonable rates.” Tardiff Opening Affidavit, ¶ 28. In fact, the FPL Order (¶¶ 11, 18) included an evergreen clause among the factors showing FPL has bargaining power precluding AT&T Florida from obtaining just and reasonable rates.

The record demonstrates that incumbent LECs own fewer poles now than in the past, and this relative change in pole ownership may have left incumbent LECs in an inferior bargaining position to other utilities. As a result, at least in some circumstances, market forces and independent negotiations may not be alone sufficient to ensure just and reasonable rates, terms and conditions for incumbent LECs pole attachments.

The FCC further explained that average ownership levels have shifted from rough parity (based on a 1977 Senate Report) to today’s situation in which electric utilities own 65 percent to 70 percent of joint use poles. 2011 Report

1 broadband competition.<sup>47</sup> Maintaining FirstEnergy’s invoiced rates in perpetuity would 2 frustrate the Commission’s competition objective because the rates are several times 3 higher than the rates charged to broadband competitors.

4 If, as Mr. Zarakas claims, electric utilities and ILECs have no alternative to continued use 5 of each other’s poles, each party has a monopoly over its own poles. Each party’s poles
6 are a necessary input into the production of its respective retail services. Further ILEC 7 attachments to electric utility poles are a necessary input in the provision of broadband 8 services.<sup>48</sup> Viewed in this light, the FCC’s concern is well-founded that negotiations (or 9 lack thereof) between electric utilities and ILECs may not produce results that facilitate 10 broadband competition.

11 Q. What is the basis for Mr. Zarakas’ claim that FirstEnergy does not have an 12 alternative to using Verizon’s joint use poles?

13 A. Mr. Zarakas’ understanding that there is no alternative to continued use of Verizon’s 14 poles appear to be informed by Mr. Coleman’s testimony, which offers the minimally 15 supported conclusion: “From an economic perspective, it makes no sense whatsoever for 16 FirstEnergy to incur a minimum initial cost [REDACTED] per mile and an annual cost 17 thereafter of [REDACTED] per mile to create duplicate pole facilities when the alternative is to 18 continue attaching to an existing pole line at a per mile cost of [REDACTED] per year.”<sup>49</sup> 19 These costs are unsupported and over [REDACTED] times as high as FirstEnergy’s investment in its 20 distribution poles.

and Order, ¶ 206 and note 617. FirstEnergy’s overall ownership percentage of about 75 percent is substantially larger than 65 percent to 70 percent. Tardiff Opening Affidavit, ¶ 20.

<sup>47</sup> The FCC cited a letter from USTA describing problematically high ratios between rates charged to ILECs and cable companies. 2011 Report and Order, ¶ 208, note 630 (citing letter from Walter B. McCormick, Jr., USTelecom, to Hon. Julius Genachowski, Chairman, FCC, WC Docket No. 07-245, GN Docket No. 09-51 at 5 (filed Mar. 31, 2011)).

1 Attachment RC-3 simply lists the results of Mr. Coleman’s calculations, with very little 2 information on inputs, data sources, and assumptions.<sup>50</sup> Based on Mr. Coleman’s 3 assumption of 30 poles per mile,<sup>51</sup> [REDACTED] per mile is equivalent to about [REDACTED] per 4 pole. No detail is provided on the particular items that Mr. Coleman used to produce this 5 result<sup>52</sup> or an explanation for the [REDACTED] per mile annual cost.

6 Though unsupported, FirstEnergy’s analysis confirms the basis for FirstEnergy’s superior 7 bargaining power. Because the alternative to paying the rates FirstEnergy demands is so 8 high, FirstEnergy has leverage to impose and maintain uneconomically high rates on 9 Verizon so long as they are less than Verizon’s far costlier alternatives.

10 V. Contrary to FirstEnergy’s Claims, Make-Ready Costs and Other 11 Agreement Terms Do Not Advantage Verizon

12 Q. Do the terms in the joint use agreements provide Verizon net material advantages 13 sufficient to justify a rate higher than properly calculated new telecom rates?

14 A. No. FirstEnergy’s limited attempt to quantify alleged advantages from certain activities 15 for which it claims third parties pay, but Verizon does not, has a number of errors and 16 omissions that invalidate FirstEnergy’s conclusion. In particular, FirstEnergy’s analysis 17 (1) improperly includes activities alleged to benefit Verizon that also benefit third 18 parties,<sup>53</sup> (2) fails to credit Verizon for the fact that Verizon incurs the cost directly for

---

<sup>50</sup> In response to Verizon’s request for the support for Mr. Coleman’s calculations, FirstEnergy’s response to Verizon’s Set II, Interrogatory No. 33 stated: “The only documents considered or relied upon were included with FirstEnergy’s Answer to Verizon’s [FCC] Complaint” and in Response to Verizon’s Set III, Interrogatory No. 1(d): “No additional records were located from the 2014 cost per mile study.” Exhibit TJT-4 & Exhibit SCM-32.

<sup>52</sup> An average of [REDACTED] can be compared to a weighted average gross pole investment of about [REDACTED] that can be calculated from FirstEnergy’s responses to Verizon’s Set III, Interrogatory No. 21, Attachments A, B, and C (Year-End 2018 Rates). Exhibits MSC-8, MSC-9, and MSC-10. An “apples-to-apples” comparison to Mr. Coleman’s figure would need to (1) account for the fact that current pole costs are higher than average original cost and (2) add reasonable amounts for the cost of transferring facilities from joint use poles to new pole lines.

<sup>53</sup> For example, FirstEnergy claimed that Verizon benefits from its tree removal activities that include Verizon’s poles. In its response to Verizon’s Set II, Interrogatory No. 12, which requested an explanation of how “FirstEnergy’s tree removals benefit Verizon’s pole plant,” FirstEnergy’s supplemental response to item (b) stated that “FirstEnergy clarifies that it does not have a list of all other entities attached to Verizon’s poles where

1 the same activities,<sup>54</sup> (3) uses improper statistical methods to calculate how much third-2 parties have paid for one-time activities such as make-ready costs, and (4) overstates the 3 frequency with which Verizon requires such activities. FirstEnergy also relies on items 4 that its discovery responses show it has not and will not charge attachers.<sup>55</sup>

5 Q. Has Mr. Schafer provided sufficient support for his quantitative and qualitative 6 assessments of the benefits he attributes to the joint use agreements?

7 A. No. Despite lengthy briefing at the FCC and testimony in this proceeding identifying 8 errors in FirstEnergy’s alleged advantages, Mr. Schafer still provides minimal or no 9 quantifications and does not purport to calculate the amount by which Verizon’s rates 10 should be higher than a properly calculated new telecom rate to offset the advantages he 11 asserts that Verizon enjoys. Mr. Schafer also lists as “undisputable” benefits items that 12 are very much disputed, including guaranteed access, reserved space, lowest space, and 13 the current agreements’ rates for FirstEnergy’s attachments of Verizon’s poles being 14 based on fully allocated costs.<sup>56</sup> To begin with, the other Verizon witnesses and I have 15 already disputed these claims. And, with respect to a claim that FirstEnergy reserves 16 more space for Verizon than Verizon needs, FirstEnergy’s own field review results 17 confirm FirstEnergy does not.<sup>57</sup>

FirstEnergy performed vegetation management, so it cannot speculate about which entities are attached or how they may have benefited from the tree removals.” Those other attachers clearly receive any benefits from tree removal that Verizon does.

<sup>55</sup> For example, FirstEnergy relies on a field audit of its service areas, but states in response to Verizon’s Set II, Interrogatory No. 7 that it has no record of the last such audit and that, if one occurs, “there will be no direct cost to Met-Ed, Penelec or Penn Power.” Exhibit SCM-18.

<sup>56</sup> Schafer Rebuttal, p. 37. Rather than being an “undisputable advantage” the net effect of the rental rates the joint use parties charge each other is a distinct disadvantage for Verizon relative to its third-party competitors. In particular, the net per pole rates I presented in the exhibit to my Direct Testimony (Tardiff Opening Affidavit, Table 1), which balance the advantages and disadvantages in current rates, show that the current rates Verizon pays are approximately three times as high as third-party rates.

1 Q. Apart from lacking necessary support, why are the gross benefits Mr. Schafer 2 claims insufficient to justify the high current rental rates?

3 A. Mr. Schafer presents only terms that he contends provide a gross advantage, but even if 4 such benefits did exist (and for reasons previously explained, they do not) that does not 5 show whether they provide net advantages that the economics of competitive neutrality 6 and the FCC's previous decisions require. In particular, a gross advantage can be offset 7 by Verizon performing some of the activities itself and/or by Verizon reciprocally 8 performing comparable activities that benefit FirstEnergy. For example, when Mr.
9 Schafer says Verizon follows a different permitting process when attaching to 10 FirstEnergy's poles,<sup>58</sup> he ignores that Verizon allows FirstEnergy to attach to Verizon's 11 poles under that same process. A reciprocal term is not a benefit.<sup>59</sup>

12 Q. Please discuss Mr. Schafer's claim that third-party attachers pay substantially more 13 for make-ready activities than does Verizon.

14 A. While Mr. Schafer claims that the current joint use agreements provide Verizon with a 15 substantial make-ready advantage relative to third-party attachers, he has not provided a 16 reliable quantitative calculation of how much higher (if at all) Verizon's competitors' 17 make-ready charges are as compared to Verizon. My Opening Affidavit, which Mr.
18 Schafer did not discuss, provided a framework and several principles for analyzing 19 alleged advantages and disadvantages in joint use agreements relative to third-party 20 agreements.<sup>60</sup> Focusing on make-ready costs, the only item for which FirstEnergy has

<sup>58</sup> Schafer Rebuttal, p. 31, note 5. This note lists numerous items that FirstEnergy previously claimed advantage Verizon relative to third-party attachers, very few for which Mr. Schafer detailed in his rebuttal testimony or provided quantitative estimates, let alone quantifications that would justify charging Verizon a higher rental rate than FirstEnergy charges Verizon's competitors. FirstEnergy's responses to Verizon's discovery responses indicate that the listed items provide no (or de minimis) advantage. For example, while claiming that Verizon benefits from not being charged for unauthorized attachments or safety violations, FirstEnergy's responses to Verizon's Set II, Interrogatory Nos. 24 and 25 indicate that third-parties have not been charged these fees. Exhibit SCM-19 and SCM-10. Similarly, FirstEnergy's response to Verizon's Set II, Interrogatory No. 22 shows that all third-parties combined paid a total of [REDACTED] in attachment application fees between 2014 and 2019, or [REDACTED] per year on average. Exhibit TJT-5. This is a trivial amount relative to the number of FirstEnergy poles to which third parties are attached. For example, Mr. Schafer's Exhibit SFS-5 indicates that the top [REDACTED] attachers alone are on [REDACTED] FirstEnergy poles.

1           alleged information about third parties, the important considerations in my framework are 2           the following.

- 3           • First, comparing the charges to third parties for make-ready work to what FirstEnergy 4           charged Verizon is incorrect when (1) Verizon performs comparable make ready work 5           when FirstEnergy attaches to Verizon’s poles (when the joint use agreement does not 6           include rates for such work)<sup>61</sup> or (2) Verizon performs some or all of the make-ready 7           work for its attachment to FirstEnergy’s poles.<sup>62</sup> The proper starting point reduces the 8           amounts FirstEnergy charges third parties per third party new attachment by the 9           reciprocal and in-kind costs Verizon incurs per each of its new attachments.
- 10          • Second, once the net charges per new attachment are calculated, that amount should be 11          multiplied by the rate at which Verizon is adding new attachments. This step recognizes 12          the likelihood that third parties are adding new attachments to their installed bases of 13          attachments at different (typically higher) rates than Verizon. That is, these parties are 14          incurring up-front charges that Verizon incurred in the past, and more than paid for in the 15          form of rates substantially higher than rates set at just and reasonable levels.
- 16          • Third, the data used to calculate make-ready (and other one-time items) must be properly 17          collected and the correct statistical methods need to be applied to the data. Although the 18          FCC’s rules have not addressed the type of data necessary to constitute clear and

<sup>61</sup> The FCC addressed this issue in its order that the rates Dominion Virginia Power had been charging Verizon were not just and reasonable. “By identifying as alleged ‘benefits’ to Verizon services that Verizon is likewise required to extend to Dominion under the Joint Use Agreements, Dominion has failed to show that Verizon receives a disproportionate benefit...” Dominion Order ¶ 21. FirstEnergy has ignored the FCC’s observations on such reciprocal costs and instead claimed that Verizon does not need to be compensated for reciprocal activities because of the annual cost of Verizon’s poles is alleged low, which is an irrelevant distraction (FirstEnergy’s FCC Answer, ¶ 95). The issue is whether the cost Verizon imposes on FirstEnergy for activities such as make-ready activities, net of any monetary payments, reciprocal activities performed for FirstEnergy, and in-kind payments are less than what third parties are charged for comparable activities. The annual costs of Verizon’s poles are irrelevant to this determination. Further, Verizon’s rate calculations produce an annual pole cost for 2018 of $103.55, which is several times as high as the current rates for FirstEnergy’s attachment to Verizon’s poles of $16.31 for Penelec and [REDACTED] for Penn Power (Met-Ed does not pay a rate for use of Verizon’s poles, although the methodology is equivalent to one in which Verizon and Met-Ed pay the same [REDACTED] per pole rate). It is also several times as high as the proportional new telecom rate of [REDACTED] per pole Verizon proposed for FirstEnergy’s use of Verizon’s poles. Calnon Direct, Exhibit MSC-1, p. VZ00100.

<sup>62</sup> “When Verizon performs a particular service and incurs costs comparable to its competitors, we agree with Verizon that Dominion may not ‘include in Verizon’s rental rates costs that Dominion does not incur.’” Dominion Order, ¶ 18.

1 convincing evidence, the same considerations that apply to evaluating data and 2 calculations supporting challenges to the Commission’s default space factor presumptive
3 inputs necessarily also apply here. In particular, the data must either include the universe 4 of attachments with make-ready activities or a scientific sample from that universe and 5 the statistics applied to that data must produce reliable and representative measures of 6 make ready charges.

7 Q. In addition to the fact that Mr. Schafer made no attempt to address the reciprocal 8 and in-kind costs Verizon incurs, are there other errors that invalidate Mr.
9 Schafer’s make-ready cost conclusions?

10 A. Yes. There are fundamental errors in Mr. Schafer’s selection of data and calculation of 11 alleged annual advantages.<sup>63</sup> Mr. Schafer reported results for [REDACTED] third-parties for each 12 of its three operating utilities based on “competitors...which submitted the largest 13 number of attachment applications during the past two years for each of the FirstEnergy 14 operating utilities.”<sup>64</sup> This selection criterion by design produces substantially upwardly 15 biased estimates of the make-ready activities and charges for third-parties in much the 16 same way as a survey of hospital visits and associated medical expenses for a sample of 17 the most frequently admitted patients would produce a unrealistically high estimate of 18 hospital visits and medical expenses for the general population.<sup>65</sup>

19 Q. Please describe Mr. Schafer’s calculation errors.

20 A. The “averages” Mr. Schafer reported (per new and previously-installed pole) do not 21 represent typical third-party experience, and even less so Verizon’s experience. In 22 particular, he [REDACTED]

<sup>63</sup> In addition, there are discrepancies between Mr. Schafer’s Exhibit SFS-5 and the documents FirstEnergy provided in support of Mr. Schafer’s calculations. For example, FirstEnergy’s response to Verizon’s Set II, Interrogatory No. 1, Attachment A, p. 1 (Exhibit TJT-6) lists requests for [REDACTED] new third-party poles in the Penn Power territory, while Exhibit SFS-5 lists [REDACTED] new third-party poles. To the extent that the count in the data request response is accurate, the effect would be to a substantial inflation in the costs Mr. Schafer reports for Penn Power.

<sup>65</sup> The [REDACTED] third parties in Exhibit SFS-5 made [REDACTED] attachment requests during 2018 and 2019 and were on [REDACTED] poles, while the comparable amounts for Verizon were 476 attachment requests and a base of 305,897 poles, i.e., the third parties’ attachment request rate was [REDACTED] times Verizon’s rate.

8 Q. Please comment on some of the other alleged advantages Mr. Schafer presents.

9 A. Mr. Schafer claims Verizon enjoys other advantages for which he does not attempt to 10 quantify the extent to which they would justify charging Verizon a higher rate to maintain 11 competitive neutrality. For example, he states that third-parties are charged for SPANS 12 at a rate of [REDACTED] for each new attachment request plus [REDACTED] for each pole in that 13 request.<sup>68</sup> In order to show third party SPANS payments are a relative or material 14 difference, Mr. Schafer should have provided information on (among other things) (1) the 15 number of poles in requests for new attachments,<sup>69</sup> (2) the annual rate at which new poles 16 are being placed, (3) whether Verizon incurs similar “in-kind” costs, and (4) whether 17 Verizon provides reciprocal free access to FirstEnergy to a process functionally 18 equivalent to SPANS.<sup>70</sup> Also, this case involves an assessment of the just and reasonable

[REDACTED]

<sup>69</sup> In a response to Verizon’s discovery requests, FirstEnergy reported that SPANS data does not provide this level of detail. FirstEnergy’s response to Verizon’s Set II, Interrogatory No. 3(a) (Exhibit SCM-16). In fact, Attachments B-D of FirstEnergy’s response to Verizon’s Set II, Interrogatory No. 3(b) provide this level of detail.

<sup>70</sup> A conservatively high “back-of-the-envelope” estimate is the following. FirstEnergy’s response to Verizon’s Set II, Interrogatory No. 3, Attachments B, C, and D show that third parties paid [REDACTED] in SPANS fees to attach to 39,382 new poles in 2018 and 2019, which would produce an average one-time charge of [REDACTED] per new pole

1 rate beginning in 2011, and Mr. Schafer failed to disclose that FirstEnergy did not use
2 SPANS, let alone charge anyone fees for use of SPANS before 2014 in Penn Power’s
3 service area or before 2016 in Met-Ed’s and Penelec’s service areas.<sup>71</sup>

4 Similarly, evaluation of the net effect of what FirstEnergy labels as guaranteed access—a 5 voluntary contract term—must be balanced with the statutory access third parties have 6 enjoyed since the passage of the 1996 Telecommunications Act. In fact, Verizon is 7 disadvantaged relative to its competitors because Verizon’s access is voluntary and 8 subject to revocation. FirstEnergy’s ability to impose (and its successful efforts to 9 maintain) unreasonably high rates for Verizon’s attachments to its poles is the result of 10 the superior bargaining power that stems from Verizon being granted access to 11 FirstEnergy’s poles by means of a voluntary contractual relationship. As the FCC has 12 previously explained, voluntary access is a unique disadvantage that an incumbent local 13 exchange carrier (ILEC) faces in deploying and upgrading its network.<sup>72</sup> After the FCC 14 implemented the statutory right of access for third parties specified in the 1996 15 Telecommunications Act, the FCC considered an electric utility’s claim that the addition 16 of the statutory right of access provided additional value to cable companies that had 17 previously attached pursuant to voluntarily-entered agreements.<sup>73</sup> The Commission 18 rejected the utility’s attempted fivefold increase in pole attachment rates, but not because 19 voluntary access had more value than mandatory access. Instead, the FCC confirmed that 20 because the electric utility “has a monopoly on pole attachments in its service area[,] any 21 rents it negotiates with other service providers not covered by the Commission’s pole 22 attachment rate formula reflect a monopoly value.”<sup>74</sup> in a relative cost of no more than ██████ per pole per year ██████.

<sup>72</sup> Ironically, attempts to justify high rates on the basis of voluntary, rather than statutory access seems to turn on its head the FCC’s observation in the 2011 Report and Order that Congress may have not provided statutory access to ILECs in order to prevent ILECs from demanding excessive rates from electric utilities. 2011 Report and Order, ¶ 212.

1 Q. Does Verizon enjoy a significant “speed-to-market” advantage?

2 A. No. The development of competition for broadband and voice service is inconsistent 3 with Mr. Zarakas’ and FirstEnergy’s claim that Verizon enjoys an enduring speed-to-4 market advantage that justifies higher annual rental rates.<sup>75</sup> In particular, FirstEnergy’s 5 FCC Answer relies on Mr. Zarakas’ incorrect claim that “[s]eamless access to a pole 6 network in the era before implementation of the Telecommunications Act of 1996” has 7 allowed Verizon to “maintain a strong market share in the evolving market” to support its 8 claim the Verizon enjoys a speed-to-market advantage.<sup>76</sup> Data provided by the FCC 9 demonstrate that there is no such advantage. Cable companies—Verizon’s largest 10 broadband competitors—had the benefit of regulated rates long before the 1996 11 Telecommunications Act, and Verizon has never been the incumbent nor dominant in the 12 provision of broadband services.<sup>77</sup> As of December 2017, cable modem service 13 accounted for 64% of Pennsylvania’s wireline broadband connections.<sup>78</sup> Further, 14 Pennsylvania’s ILECs’ share of wired switched and VoIP lines had fallen to 49 percent 15 by December 2017<sup>79</sup>—a figure that does not even account for the fact that 43.4 percent of 16 Pennsylvania’s households do not even have a wired phone and another 17.7 percent are 17 mostly wireless.<sup>80</sup>

<sup>75</sup> Mr. Schafer (p. 36) also claims that Verizon enjoys a speed-to-market advantage. While he did not provide a quantitative estimate, FirstEnergy’s FCC Answer (¶¶ 99-103) included a “back-of-the-envelope” estimate for this alleged benefit based only on hypothetical values. 2 Q. Please summarize your conclusion on the rental rates Mr. Schafer presented in his 3 rebuttal testimony.

4 A. Mr. Schafer presents what he believes are the rates that result from the FCC’s new 5 telecom rate formula.<sup>81</sup> As described in the next section, FirstEnergy has also argued that 6 the higher rates it states it charges to certain third-parties can be properly charged to 7 Verizon as well.<sup>82</sup> This section explains that (1) Mr. Schafer’s calculated new telecom 8 rates are quite close to Verizon’s calculations, providing additional corroboration that 9 FirstEnergy’s rate demands remain well above just and reasonable levels and (2) 10 FirstEnergy’s field review of pole characteristics it uses in place of certain default inputs 11 to the FCC’s rate formulas has not been validated to the extent necessary to replace the 12 FCC’s default inputs.

16 A. No. Mr. Schafer asserts that Verizon made errors in its 2019 rate calculations which, he 17 says, “seem to have been repeated in all Verizon’s calculations.”<sup>83</sup> To the contrary, the 18 2011 through 2019 rate calculations in Dr. Calnon’s direct testimony are correct as I 19 explained in my Opening Affidavit. Mr. Schafer did not discuss, let alone rebut, the 20 economic rationale for Verizon’s rate calculations that I previously provided.

21 Q. What are Mr. Schafer’s specific criticisms?

22 A. Mr. Schafer complains about (1) Verizon’s assignment of accumulated deferred taxes, 23 which are in an account that is less granular than gross investment accounts, (2)
24 Verizon’s input for the number of distribution poles in FirstEnergy’s service territories, 25 (3) Verizon’s rate of return inputs, and (4) Verizon’s use of default inputs to assign

1 inputs). In addition, while Mr. Schafer did not include Verizon's use of the default
2 appurtenance factor (0.85) among his criticism of Verizon's calculations, Mr. Schafer
3 replaced that default value in his rate calculations for Verizon's use of FirstEnergy's 4 poles.<sup>84</sup> In the case of Verizon's assignment of the accumulated deferred taxes and the 5 rate of return input (which differs substantially from FirstEnergy's input for Penn Power), 6 my Opening Affidavit explained the rationale for Verizon's calculations for each of these 7 items. FirstEnergy's claim that the pole count and space factor inputs represent errors is 8 inaccurate for the simple reason that the complete set of pole count values Mr. Schafer 9 uses and the field audit data he relies on were first provided after Verizon filed its direct 10 testimony. Mr. Schafer's use of those values is also incorrect for other reasons I will next 11 explain.

12 Q. Do Mr. Schafer's differences in opinion regarding inputs have much effect on the 13 new telecom rental rates the parties have presented?

14 A. No. Before addressing Mr. Schafer's individual criticisms, it is important to note that for 15 the most part he calculates new telecom rates for Verizon's use of FirstEnergy's poles 16 produce rates very close to Verizon's proposed new telecom rates for use of 17 FirstEnergy's poles. This is shown in Table 2, which lists the rates that Verizon and Mr.
18 Schafer calculated for Verizon's use of FirstEnergy's poles for the most recent year.

---

1 Table 2: 2019 Annual Per-Pole Rental Rates

	Met-Ed	Penelec	Penn Power
Current Rate
New Telecom Rate (Verizon)	$13.83	$9.07	$11.80
New Telecom Rate (FirstEnergy)	$13.67	$8.63	$13.18

3 The first row lists the rates for Verizon’s use of FirstEnergy’s poles under the current 4 agreements.<sup>85</sup> In all cases, whether calculated by Verizon<sup>86</sup> or FirstEnergy,<sup>87</sup> the new 5 telecom rates for Verizon’s use of FirstEnergy’s poles are far less than [REDACTED] of the current 6 rates. As discussed above, Mr. Schafer’s attempt to quantify purported advantages in the 7 joint use agreements (relative to third party agreement) is incorrect and unreliable and 8 thus falls far short of the clear and convincing evidence necessary to justify a rate in 9 excess of the properly calculated new telecom rate.

10 Q. Why do Verizon’s and First Energy’s pole counts differ?

11 A. Verizon calculated rates using pole count information provided by Mr. Schafer and 12 attached to Verizon’s FCC Complaint as Exhibit 28. FirstEnergy asserts a different 13 number is appropriate.<sup>88</sup> In any event, use of the new number would produce a 14 marginally lower rate than Verizon calculated, due to a modest increase in the number of 15 FirstEnergy’s distribution poles.<sup>89</sup> Verizon’s approach is reasonable and favors 16 FirstEnergy.

---

<sup>85</sup> For the Met-Ed agreement, which charges Verizon a rate of [REDACTED] per pole for poles between its current ownership share of 18.8 percent and 45 percent, the rate in Table 2 is net payment per net pole (total payments from Verizon to FirstEnergy divided by the difference between FirstEnergy- and Verizon-owned poles), which is described in Table 1 of my Opening Affidavit.

<sup>87</sup> Schafer Rebuttal, Tables 1-3. The rates for First Energy differ from the rates included in its Answer, primarily because FirstEnergy replaced the default appurtenances factor (0.85) with alternative values, as discussed in more detail below. FirstEnergy’s new telecom rates in its Answer were [REDACTED] for Met-Ed, Penelec, and Penn Power, respectively.

<sup>88</sup> FirstEnergy’s Response to Verizon’s Set III, Interrogatory No. 21, Attachments A, B, and B (Year-End 2018 Rates). Exhibits MSC-8, MSC-9, and MSC-10.

<sup>89</sup> The rates calculated with the new FirstEnergy pole counts, which correspond to the second row of Table 2, are $13.74, $9.05, and $11.71, respectively.

1 Q. Please describe the different treatment of accumulated deferred taxes.

2 A. As I explained in my Opening Affidavit,<sup>90</sup> because FERC Form 1 reports accumulated 3 deferred taxes for electric operations, with no breakdown into accounts such as poles 4 (Account 364) and overhead lines (Accounts 364, 365, and 369), it is necessary to assign 5 portions of the total deferred taxes to specific accounts when calculating the net cost of a 6 bare pole and the maintenance carrying charge factor, which requires the net investment 7 in overhead lines. Verizon allocates accumulated deferred taxes in proportion to 8 depreciated investment (gross investment less accumulated depreciation), while 9 FirstEnergy allocates in proportion to original (gross) investment. As I explained 10 previously,<sup>91</sup> Verizon's approach is consistent with similar regulatory approaches and is 11 clearly not an error, since the 1987 and 2001 FCC pole attachment orders provided no 12 specific guidance on how accumulated deferred taxes should be assigned to specific 13 accounts.<sup>92</sup> Perhaps, more important, use of original (gross) investment in place of 14 depreciated investment produces very little difference in rates: allocating based on gross 15 investment produces rates of $13.85, $9.09, and $11.74 per pole for Met-Ed, Penelec, and 16 Penn Power respectively, instead of the $13.83, $9.07, and $11.80 per pole Verizon-17 calculated rates in Table 2.

18 Q. Do the parties' differences in the rate of return input result in significant rental rate 19 differences?

20 A. Only for Penn Power. Although FirstEnergy apparently bases its inputs for use of Met-21 Ed's and Penelec's poles on rates of return adopted in 2007 despite the two rate

The appendices to these orders refer to FERC Form 1 accounts and subaccounts. For example, in the case of accumulated deferred taxes, these appendices refer to accumulated deferred taxes for poles, without specifying a formula for allocated total accumulated taxes to poles. In response to Verizon's Set III, No. 12 Interrogatory, FirstEnergy quotes from the FCC's 1998 Nevada State Cable v. Nevada Bell (13 FCC Rcd 16744) Order to support its allocation of deferred taxes based on gross, rather than depreciated plant. Exhibit TJT-7. While the FCC's order did refer to "our formulas" for allocating deferred taxes, the paragraphs from the 1987 order cited in support of this specific allocation address the issue of the effect of accelerated tax depreciation, rather than how to allocate the FERC accumulated depreciation totals to poles and other subaccounts.

1 proceedings each company has had since then, there is very little difference between 2 Verizon's and FirstEnergy's inputs for Met-Ed's and Penelec's rate of return.<sup>93</sup> For Penn
3 Power, the difference is much greater because FirstEnergy uses a more than three decades 4 old 11.14% rate of return adopted by the Pennsylvania Public Utility Commission in 5 1988 for the 2014-2019 rental years, and an even higher 12.90% rate of return for the 6 2011-2013 rental years. As I explained in my Opening Affidavit,<sup>94</sup> FirstEnergy continues 7 to use these outdated inputs, despite the fact that it reported much lower costs of debt and 8 equity in a recent rate case than it reported in the 1988 proceeding that adopted the 9 outdated 11.14% rate of return. Adjusting for the difference in FirstEnergy's recent and 10 1980s debt and equity costs produces a rate of return that is within the range of the rates
11 of return presented in the most recent rate case that resulted in a Commissioned-approved 12 settlement,<sup>95</sup> reflects the economic costs in investing in poles and other assets, and is also 13 very close to the rate of return Verizon uses in its rate calculations.

14 Q. Have you reviewed and evaluated the results of the field review from which Mr.
15 Schafer selected certain space factor inputs?

16 A. Yes. FirstEnergy's rate calculations use the results of a field review of [REDACTED] 17 FirstEnergy poles and [REDACTED] Verizon poles that was commenced after Verizon filed its 18 pole attachment complaint at the FCC and designed to produce more favorable space 19 factor inputs as replacements for the FCC's default inputs. While the FCC's pole 20 attachment rules allow pole owners such as FirstEnergy to use alternative space factor 21 inputs, there are certain reliability and substantiation requirements for the effort.<sup>96</sup>

22 Q. What are those requirements?

23 A. In order to evaluate the results of FirstEnergy's field review, access to the methodology 24 and information requires more than the summary FirstEnergy provides through Precision

1 Consulting’s report (Exhibit GC-1 to Mr. Guo’s testimony) and the files provided in 2 response to Verizon data requests, Set II, Interrogatory No. 34. The most accurate 3 measures of pole characteristics would be the result of starting with a list of joint use 4 poles (in sampling terms, the universe we want to characterize), identifying the 5 characteristics of interest, implementing a process for obtaining accurate measures, and 6 implementing a process to validate those measures to ensure measurement errors are 7 within an acceptable range. Participation of both owners of the joint use poles would 8 contribute to the reliability of the results, e.g., establishing the correct list of joint use 9 poles and in validating the pole characteristics are properly identified.

10 Q. Did FirstEnergy’s field review process exhibit the proper care these requirements 11 call for?

12 A. No. The process was completed in less than two months (over a period including the 13 end-of-year holidays) with the specifications for the effort provided by counsel in 14 response to Verizon’s FCC complaint, rather than as a result of a collaboration of the 15 joint use owners with an objective of producing reliable measures of relevant pole 16 characteristics.<sup>97</sup>

17 Q. Did FirstEnergy provide the information necessary to validate the results of the field 18 survey?

19 A. Only just recently, even though validation requires access to the identity of and actual 20 results for each of the approximately [REDACTED] FirstEnergy and Verizon poles measured in 21 FirstEnergy’s field review.<sup>98</sup> These data are needed to permit an inspection of the results, <sup>97</sup> December 11, 2019 email from Stephen Shafer to Scott Carlin (DRG), FirstEnergy’s response to Verizon’s Set II, Interrogatory 19, Attachment A stating, among other things, the direction provided by counsel and the purpose of the exercise and December 19, 2019 email from Steven Johnson (DRG) to Mr. Schafer and others requesting further discussions to ensure data will be appropriate for FirstEnergy’s intended use. Exhibit SCM-19.

<sup>98</sup> In Teleport v. Georgia Power (¶ 16), the Commission explained the “statistically sound survey should be submitted.” FirstEnergy did not submit its data with its Answer. It also did not produce the data in response to Verizon’s November 20, 2019 Interrogatory 10, which requested any data relevant to determining space factor inputs for the joint use poles at issue in this proceeding. Instead, FirstEnergy waited until May 22, 2020 to provide Verizon access to the data that it seeks to use to increase the rates it charges Verizon.

1 as being larger than the pole height), validation of the calculations presented in 2 Precision’s summary, and the ability to implement corrections and/or perform alternative 3 statistical analysis on the underlying data FirstEnergy did not produce these data in the 4 course of the FCC proceeding despite Verizon’s request for it. FirstEnergy finally 5 produced some of the data on May 22 (which it corrected on June 2), after it submitted its 6 rebuttal testimony on May 21.

7 Q. What have you concluded from your review and evaluation of field review results?

8 A. Mr. Guo’s summary of the field review results and the supporting documentation 9 produced in response to Verizon’s discovery requests reveal that the field review was not 10 properly conducted and the reliability of the results is suspect and should not be used to 11 set rates. Presumptive averages for space factor inputs should pertain to the joint use 12 poles at issue in this proceeding. In sampling terminology, this means that the universe 13 from which the sample of joint use poles is drawn should be the poles for which rent is 14 being set. FirstEnergy’s field audit reviewed areas in Pennsylvania and Maryland, and 15 selected poles from a substantially larger universe of poles than the 513,615 joint use 16 poles reflected in FirstEnergy’s invoices at issue in this and the parallel Maryland FCC
17 proceeding. This is shown in Table 3.<sup>99</sup>

<sup>99</sup> The discrepancy between the field review pole count universe and invoiced pole counts occurred despite the fact that a December 11, 2019 memo from Stephen Schafer to Scott Carlin stated that “the audit will include only poles that are jointly used by FirstEnergy and Verizon” and presented counts for these joint use poles quite close to the invoiced numbers shown in Table 1 of Exhibit TJT-1 of my Direct Testimony. Exhibit SCM-29 (FirstEnergy’s response to Verizon’s Set II, Interrogatory No. 19, Attachment B).

The upper block of Table 3 lists the universe from which Precision drew samples of poles, the middle block lists the joint use poles included in the most recent invoices which FirstEnergy agrees with, and the last block lists the differences. For the three Pennsylvania territories, Precision’s universe includes approximately [REDACTED] FirstEnergy poles and [REDACTED] Verizon poles that did not appear on the most recent invoices. As described in more detail below, Precision’s universe includes poles outside the joint use territories, e.g., poles in other ILEC territories and/or poles within the joint use territory to which Verizon does not attach.<sup>100</sup> For the Potomac Edison service area in Maryland, Precision’s universe includes [REDACTED]

[REDACTED]

[REDACTED]. This last observation suggests that Precision’s data mistakenly identified some FirstEnergy poles as being owned by Verizon. In any event, the mismatch between the universe of poles reported in the Precision report and the joint use poles at issue here

<sup>100</sup> The likelihood that Precision’s sample includes poles to which Verizon is not attached is suggested by the sample sizes reported in Table 3 of Exhibit CG-1. In all cases, the number of poles used to calculate the space occupied by Verizon is less than the number for other inputs, such as pole length and number of attaching entities. In fact, this difference is explained by the sample including poles on which Verizon has no attachments.

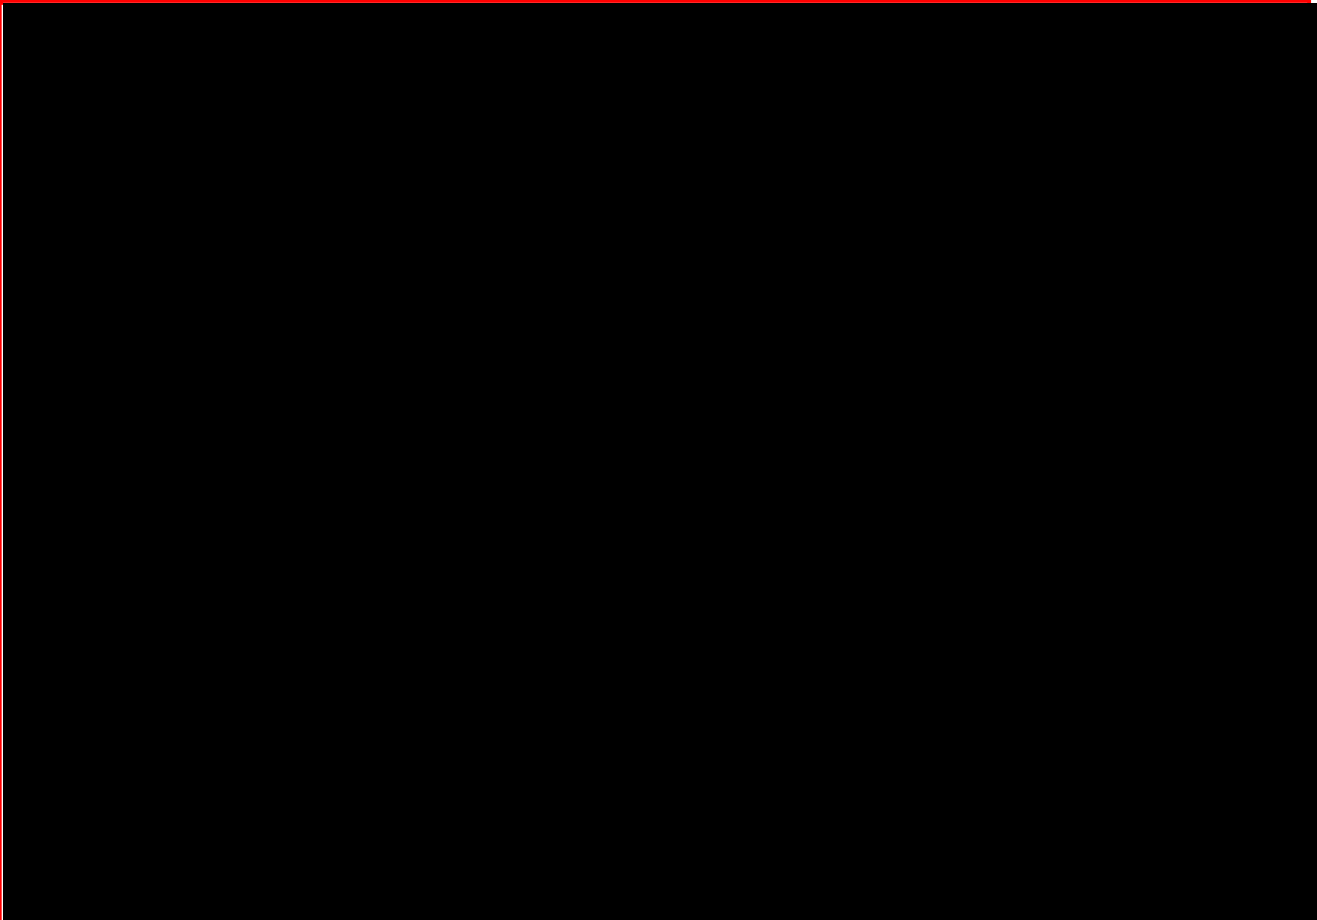

1 violates a fundamental sampling principle that in order to extrapolate a sampling statistic 2 to its underlying population, the sample must be drawn from that population.

3 Q. Do the sample sizes Precision based its space factor inputs match the sample sizes in 4 its sampling plan?

5 A. No. Based on Mr. Guo's Rebuttal Testimony, Exhibit CG-1, Tables 3 and 4 and

7 Attachments F and G, Table 4 [REDACTED]

1 Q. How do the results of the field review compare to the inputs Verizon used in its 2 rental rate calculations?

3 A. Despite the fact that FirstEnergy’s field review and methodology were not properly 4 supported or vetted, some of the results reported by Precision tend to corroborate 5 Verizon’s inputs and/or undermine inputs previously used by FirstEnergy. These results 6 are reported in Table 5.<sup>105</sup>

7 Table 5: FirstEnergy’s Calculated Average Space Factor Inputs

	Attaching Entities	Pole Height	Unusable Space	Verizon Space	FirstEnergy Space Occupied	FirstEnergy Space Needed
Met-Ed
Penelec
Penn Power
Potomac
Default	5	37.5	24	1	10.5

9 In particular, although FirstEnergy reports a number of attaching entities close to [REDACTED] (in 10 contrast to the default value of 5 for urbanized areas),<sup>106</sup> it also reports values for 11 unusable space, space occupied by Verizon, and space occupied by FirstEnergy that are 12 generally close to the default values used in Verizon’s calculations.<sup>107</sup> Significantly, the 13 survey averages for Verizon’s space are much closer to the default of 1 foot than to the 14 three feet that FirstEnergy used in its prior rate calculations provided to Verizon,<sup>108</sup> which 15 it claimed as an advantage for Verizon relative to third-party agreements.<sup>109</sup> In addition,

<sup>105</sup> Values reported in inches in Precision’s report are converted to feet.

<sup>106</sup> These values are lower than the numbers of attaching entities of [REDACTED] for Met-Ed, sourced to [REDACTED] of FirstEnergy’s response to Set II, Interrogatory No. 15, Attachment A11 and [REDACTED] for Penelec, sourced to [REDACTED] of FirstEnergy’s response to Set II, Interrogatory No. 15, Attachment B11. Exhibits MSC-12 and MSC-13.

<sup>107</sup> FirstEnergy space occupied is portion of the pole from the safety space to the pole’s top (power zone). Space needed, which averages about 0.5 to 1.5 feet less than occupied space is based on Davey Research Group visually determining more space is allocation than required. Carlin Rebuttal, Exhibit SC-1, p. F00134.

<sup>109</sup> Tardiff Opening Affidavit, ¶ 28. Because the FCC’s telecom rate formulas charge attaching parties for the space they actually occupy, the amount of that occupied space itself confers no advantage to any party.

1 because the field review was designed to assign a minimum of 1 foot of space to Verizon 2 on every pole, the values produced for space occupied by Verizon are necessarily 3 overstated.<sup>110</sup> In contrast, the field review was not designed with any minimum amount 4 of space assigned to FirstEnergy. As a result, Verizon’s use of a 10.5-foot value for 5 space occupied by FirstEnergy is conservative and trends low.

6 Q. How did FirstEnergy calculate the appurtenances factor it used in place of the 7 FCC’s default input?

8 A. To calculate the net bare pole investment, the FCC’s rules require “[a]n adjustment to a 9 utility’s net pole investment (of 15% for electric utilities and 5% for ILECs) is necessary
10 to eliminate investment in crossarms and other non-pole related items.”<sup>111</sup> FirstEnergy’s 11 response to Verizon’s Set II, Interrogatory No. 17, Attachments J, Q, and Z<sup>112</sup> includes 12 calculations for the most recent rate year that purportedly justify different factors of 13 [REDACTED] (which is equivalent to a [REDACTED] percent adjustment) for Met-Ed, [REDACTED] (which 14 is equivalent to a [REDACTED] percent adjustment) for Penelec, and [REDACTED] (which is 15 equivalent to a [REDACTED] percent adjustment) for Penn Power, all of which if used would 16 produce slightly different pole attachment rates.

17 Q. Do FirstEnergy’s calculations justify replacing the FCC’s appurtenance factor?

18 A. No. Attachment J lists [REDACTED] million as the amount of gross investment in non-19 appurtenance items for Met-Ed (bare investments in wood poles, excluding appurtenance 20 items), which is [REDACTED]
21 [REDACTED]. Starting with the $415.8 million for Account 364 (which both Verizon’s 22 and FirstEnergy’s rate calculations do), an appurtenance factor of 0.8141—or 18.59 23 percent, higher than the default percentage—would produce $338.6 million in non-

1 appurtenance investment.<sup>113</sup> Similarly, Attachment Q lists [REDACTED] as the amount
2 of gross investment in non-appurtenance items for Penelec. Starting with the $547.3 3 million for Account 364, an appurtenance factor of 0.8371—or 16.29 percent, higher than 4 the default percentage—would produce $458.1 million in non-appurtenance
5 investment.<sup>114</sup> Attachment Z, which has the same information for Penn Power, lists 6 [REDACTED] as the amount of gross investment in non-appurtenance items, which when 7 divided by the $118.5 million for Account 364, would produce an appurtenance factor of 8 0.8133—or 18.67 percent, higher than the default percentage—would produce $96.4 9 million in non-appurtenance investment.<sup>115</sup> Verizon’s use of the 15 percent default 10 appurtenance factor was appropriate and conservative, because the default factor 11 produces more investment in non-appurtenance items than FirstEnergy’s records show.

12 VII. FirstEnergy’s Third-Party Rental Rates Further Demonstrate the 13 Exercise of its Superior Bargaining Power

14 Q. Does FirstEnergy charge comparable rates to all of its third-party attachers?

15 A. No. FirstEnergy’s FCC Answer reported a range of third-party rental rates and then 16 erroneously claimed that the entire range provides benchmark rates for Verizon’s

---

<sup>113</sup> FirstEnergy calculated a larger appurtenance factor because it reduced the amount of Account 364 investment by [REDACTED] for items that were included in what was reported in FERC Form 1, but not included when calculating the alternative factor. Applying FirstEnergy’s inflated factor to the FERC Form 1 investment produces a result of [REDACTED] million, which exceeds the non-appurtenance investment it measured by [REDACTED]. Exhibit TJT-9 (FirstEnergy’s response to Verizon’s Set II, Interrogatory 17, Attachment J).

1 attachments.<sup>116</sup> For example, in 2019 the third party paying the highest rate ( [REDACTED] per 2 pole) paid [REDACTED] percent more than the lowest rate ( [REDACTED] per pole) in the Met-Ed
3 territory, [REDACTED] percent more in the Penelec territory ( [REDACTED] per pole vs. [REDACTED] per pole), 4 and [REDACTED] percent more in the Penn Power territory ( [REDACTED] per pole vs. [REDACTED] per pole).

5 Q. What is the economic significance of such wide rental rate ranges?

6 A. As a fundamental initial economic matter, because, as FirstEnergy observes, “the 7 agreements at issue predominantly share the same common non-rate provisions,”<sup>117</sup> 8 rather than justifying charging Verizon high attachment rates, the widely differing rate 9 ranges are FirstEnergy’s acknowledging price discrimination—charging different prices 10 for essentially the same service on essentially the same terms and conditions. In 11 unregulated markets, price discrimination manifests differences in market power, which 12 the FCC’s pole attachment regulations have been explicitly designed to prevent.<sup>118</sup>

13 Q. Is the lower end of FirstEnergy’s rental rate ranges determined by the FCC’s 14 formulas?

15 A. In many cases, they are in line with the FCC’s cable and new telecom rate formulas.
16 FirstEnergy states the license agreements attached to its Answer “contain nearly identical 17 provisions” and FirstEnergy’s document production [REDACTED] 18 [REDACTED].<sup>119</sup> FirstEnergy’s response to 20 television companies and CLECs include rental rates higher than the FCC’s maximum

<sup>118</sup> For example, in its order implementing the pole attachment provisions of the 1996 Telecommunications Act, the FCC stated:

Section 703 requires the Commission to prescribe regulations to govern the charges for pole attachments used by telecommunications carriers to provide telecommunications services. Section 703 also requires that the Commission’s regulations ensure that a utility charges just, reasonable, and nondiscriminatory rates for pole attachments.

8 A. Yes, although I reserve the right to supplement my surrebuttal testimony if appropriate.

Reference Answer Brief ¶ 95 and Answer Attachment B ¶ 24.

- (a) Describe in detail the basis for FirstEnergy's allegation that FirstEnergy "incurs significant unreimbursed expense responding to emergency events on Verizon-owned poles," including the expense that was unreimbursed.
- (b) For each such "unreimbursed expense," identify the location and pole identification number for the Verizon-owned pole, the work performed, the amount of the "unreimbursed expense," all other entities with facilities attached to that pole, and state whether and how FirstEnergy's work provided Verizon a benefit that was different from that provided other facilities attached to the pole.
- (c) Also for each "unreimbursed expense," identify the "emergency event" and all efforts to notify Verizon of the "emergency event" and state whether FirstEnergy took ownership of the pole following the "emergency event."
- (d) Provide all documents concerning the allegation that FirstEnergy "incurs significant unreimbursed expense responding to emergency events on Verizon-owned poles," including all accident reports, studies, analyses, invoices, cost records, and payment records concerning the allegation.

5/18/2020 ORIGINAL RESPONSE:

- (a) Where Verizon poles have failed due to car pole accidents, storm events or undetected rot, the poles need urgent repair or replacement. Verizon is given a reasonable amount of time to commit to making timely repairs and replacements. Where Verizon is unresponsive or late, FirstEnergy will replace the pole.
- (b) Attached is a listing of the poles located from FirstEnergy's outage management system. See Verizon Interrogatory Set II, No. 14, Attachments A and B.
- (c) The outage management listing includes comments where dispatchers have attempted to contact Verizon.

(d) The outage management system provides the most complete record available with such limited access to written logs and employee interviews.

5/28/2020 SUPPLEMENTAL RESPONSE:

(a) FirstEnergy originally answered the question that was asked by describing the basis for its allegation that FirstEnergy "incurs significant unreimbursed expense responding to emergency events on Verizon-owned poles." The question did not ask FirstEnergy to explain whether the referenced expenses are unreimbursed. However, the quoted passage from FirstEnergy's Answer clearly states that the Companies incur "significant unreimbursed expense." Nor did the question ask FirstEnergy why the expenses are unreimbursed. Notwithstanding, FirstEnergy clarifies that the referenced expenses are unreimbursed. However, due to the COVID-19 pandemic, FirstEnergy's personnel currently do not have access to the physical files that would be required to provide a breakdown of (1) the expenses that were invoiced by FirstEnergy and not paid by Verizon and (2) the expenses that were not invoiced by FirstEnergy.

(b) FirstEnergy's original response to subpart (b) also should have referenced Attachment C to Interrogatory Set II, No. 14.

FirstEnergy observes that it does not have a list of all other entities attached to Verizon's poles where FirstEnergy responded to emergency events, so it cannot speculate about which entities are attached or how they may have benefited from the inspections.

FirstEnergy clarifies that Attachment A to Interrogatory Set II, No. 14 is the best available electronic record Penelec has that allows a search of Verizon-owned poles that have been replaced and that Attachment B to Interrogatory Set II, No. 14 is the best available electronic record Met-Ed has of emergency event pole replacements. Moreover, Attachment C to Interrogatory Set II, No. 14 is the best available electronic record Penn Power has of emergency event pole replacements.

FirstEnergy provided the records that it had available. FirstEnergy does not have a version of Attachment A that is limited to the parties' overlapping service areas in Pennsylvania and is limited to "emergency events." However, Attachment A provides the Verizon pole numbers in Column A and a description of the event in Column C, so Verizon can perform its own analysis about whether the poles are located in the parties' overlapping service areas in Pennsylvania and whether the incidents were emergency events.

(c) Due to COVID-19 restrictions on FirstEnergy's office buildings, FirstEnergy cannot obtain its personnel's paper job sleeves to confirm whether invoicing was issued or payment was received. FirstEnergy also notes that the question did not ask FirstEnergy to, as alleged in Verizon's email dated May 20, 2020, provide information about "efforts after the emergency to seek reimbursement.” Notwithstanding, FirstEnergy avers that due to the COVID-19 pandemic, FirstEnergy's personnel currently do not have access to the physical files that would be required to provide all of the details on FirstEnergy's efforts to seek reimbursement from Verizon after the emergencies. In addition, FirstEnergy clarifies that the “outage management listing” referenced in the original response are the outage management system records set forth in Attachments A, B, and C to Interrogatory Set II, No. 14. Furthermore, Penelec's and Met-Ed's PowerOn records of communications with Verizon about the notification of and response to emergency events for the periods 2011-2014 and 2015-2020 are attached as Attachments D and E, respectively. Attachments A through E are the best records currently available to FirstEnergy personnel given the current restrictions due to the COVID-19 pandemic.

(d) FirstEnergy clarifies that the outage management system records were provided in Attachments A, B, and C to this original response. FirstEnergy has limited access to written logs and employee interviews because the Companies have been working from home due to the COVID-19 pandemic and do not have remote access to those documents.

Reference Answer to Complaint ¶ 43.

- (a) For each entity with facilities attached to FirstEnergy's poles since 2011, state whether the entity paid FirstEnergy an agreement preparation fee under its License Agreement.
- (b) For each entity that paid FirstEnergy an agreement preparation fee, identify the amount of the fee it paid, the year it paid the fee, and the total number of FirstEnergy distribution poles to which the entity currently has facilities attached. Separately present the information for poles owned by Met-Ed, Penelec, and Penn Power.
- (c) Provide all documents, work papers, invoices, cost records, and payment records concerning the analysis.

RESPONSE:

Reference Answer Brief ¶ 73 and Answer Attachment B at ¶¶ 14-15 & Ex. SFS-1:

- (a) Identify who prepared the chart at Answer Attachment B, Ex. SFS-1, who selected the time period for the chart and the basis for the time period selected, who selected the entities to be included in the chart, and the entities referenced in the chart.
- (b) For each "Attachment Request" included as a "2018-2019 Attachment Request," identify the location of the relevant pole(s), the pole identification number(s), the "Make-Ready Engineering (MRE)" and "Make-Ready Construction (MRC)" work performed, the amount FirstEnergy invoiced for the "Make-Ready Engineering (MRE)" and "Make-Ready Construction (MRC)" work, and the amount FirstEnergy collected for the "Make-Ready Engineering (MRE)" and "Make-Ready Construction (MRC)" work. Separately present the information for poles owned by Met-Ed, Penelec, and Penn Power.
- (c) Provide all documents, work papers, analyses, invoices, cost records, and payment records considered when preparing the chart.

5/18/2020 ORIGINAL RESPONSE:

(a) The chart was developed under the supervision of Steve Schafer. The period of 2018-19 was selected as it is reflective of the current pole attachment environment, including increasing numbers of pole attachment applications and increased use of contractors to perform said MRE/MRC work. The top five entities were selected based on the volume of poles that were submitted in new applications within the same time period for Met-Ed, Penelec and Penn Power, respectively.

(b) See Verizon Interrogatory Set II, No. 2(b).

(c) See Verizon Interrogatory Set II, No. 1, CONFIDENTIAL Attachments A through D.

5/28/2020 SUPPLEMENTAL RESPONSE:

(a) FirstEnergy clarifies that the chart was developed by Andrew Bowen under the supervision of Deanna DeWitt and Stephen Schafer in consultation with legal counsel.

Reference Answer Brief ¶ 105. Identify all support for FirstEnergy's contention that "allocation of Accumulated Deferred Taxes (Electric) to distribution poles .... should be allocated based on the ratio: Account 364 Gross Pole Investment ÷ Gross Electric Plant Investment" and not "based on the ratio: (Account 364 Gross Pole Investment – Depreciation) ÷ (Gross Electric Plant Investment - Depreciation)." Provide all documents concerning these contentions or cite to publicly available documents.

RESPONSE:

FirstEnergy has not compiled an exhaustive list of "all support" that may exist regarding FirstEnergy's contention that "allocation of Accumulated Deferred Taxes (Electric) to distribution poles .... should be allocated based on the ratio: Account 364 Gross Pole Investment ÷ Gross Electric Plant Investment" and not "based on the ratio: (Account 364 Gross Pole Investment – Depreciation) ÷ (Gross Electric Plant Investment - Depreciation)." For representative support, FirstEnergy refers Verizon to In the Matter of Nevada State Cable Television Association, Complainant, v. Nevada Bell, Respondent, PA-96-001, 13 FCC Rcd 16774, 16780-81 (June 18, 1998). In that case, the FCC denied Nevada Bell's "alternative modifications to the accumulated deferred taxes figure" of the FCC's formula, which would calculate Nevada Bell's deferred taxes "based on their specific net plant and tax basis for poles" or, alternatively, would allocate the deferred taxes "based upon net plant, i.e., gross plant investment less the related book depreciation reserve." Id. In rejecting these proposals, the FCC stated the following:

We decline to waive our existing methodology to adopt either of Nevada Bell's suggested approaches to calculating accumulated deferred taxes. Our formula for accumulated deferred taxes on poles divides the gross pole investment by the total gross plant investment, then multiplies that fraction times the total accumulated deferred tax. We believe that this formula is consistent with Congressional intent to provide a fair but expeditious methodology for calculating just and reasonable pole attachment rates. We also reject Nevada Bell's modification because adjustments to one account would necessitate adjustments to other accounts and "unduly complicate the pole attachment rate calculation process without materially increasing its accuracy."

Reference Answer Brief ¶¶ 104-110 and Answer Attachment G.

- (a) Describe in detail the basis for FirstEnergy's allegation that "Verizon's calculations contain several errors" and that FirstEnergy attached "proper calculations" at Answer Attachment G.
- (b) Identify the person(s) involved in FirstEnergy's analysis of Verizon's calculations and in FirstEnergy's calculation of the Attachment G rates, and
- (c) Provide all documents concerning FirstEnergy's analysis of Verizon's calculations and FirstEnergy's calculation of rates, including all calculations, inputs, assumptions, and source materials to the extent they are not publicly available.

RESPONSE:

a) The answer to this question was described thoroughly in Paragraphs 104 through 110 of the Answer Brief and Section IV of Mr. Stephen Schafer's rebuttal testimony (FirstEnergy Statement No. 1-R).

b) The analysis was performed under the supervision of Mr. Schafer by Deanna DeWitt and Andrew Bowen in consultation with legal counsel.

c) Attachment G to FirstEnergy's Answer to Verizon's Complaint fully describes the calculations, inputs, assumptions, and source materials contained therein. For other documents "concerning FirstEnergy's analysis of Verizon's calculations and FirstEnergy's calculation of rates," please see FirstEnergy's Answer to Verizon's Complaint, FirstEnergy's Motion for Leave to File a Response to Verizon's Reply, FirstEnergy's Motion for Leave to Supplement and Correct Answer to Verizon's Complaint, and FirstEnergy Statement Nos. 1-R through 7-R. Copies of these documents are already in Verizon's possession. Please also see Verizon Interrogatory Set II, No. 17, Attachments A through Z.
