Subject: [External] east dunkard water athority

i recently sent an email concerning the situation in dunkard township, i hate to be a bother, but something came to my mind. it seems the township solicitor was at fault for not filing for the necessary certificate in order for the edwa to sell water outside the township, so it appears that the solicitor is the responsible party. as a former business owner, i carried liability insurance to protect me if i would have ever acted in a negligent manner, either knowingly or unknowingly. and i have worked for several companies, some received hefty fines, and yet none of them asked the employees or the customers to pay those fines, i do think that that would be an illegal activity. and last but not least, if the customers must pay the fine, shouldn't that mean that they are responsible for it, which means the customers are the rightful owners of the EDWA, i think the best course of action would be to place the edwa under the swpa, as they have already received their permit to connect to the edwa. the customers would be better served. thank you for this opportunity
