im sorry to keep sending out emails, but i keep learning things. i have learned that this case is before you to determine the fine pending. it was brought about because of the edwas lawyer who apparently mahe some errors. now the edwa wants to pass that cost onto the customers instead of making the law firm pay for it. i did some research and found some reasons why law firms need malpractice insurance. " common causes of malpractice lawsuits include misfiled or delated paperwork, and failures of professional judgement such as failure to know the law, errors in planning or inadequate discussion or investigation, and failure to follow instructions. additional claims come from allegations of conflicts of interest, fraud of failure to obtain client consent. any mistake that your firm makes that causes significant expense ro losses to a client is a possible cause of a malpractice claim." so, why hasnt the edwa pursued this, as this is exactly what has happened? why try to make the customers pay for something that the law firm did, unless there is some collusion between the lawyers and the edwa, i also learned that the dunkard township has $225,000 .00 in an account that can be used to pay the fine, if it is imposed. the supervisors are over the EDWA. i hope you drop the fine, but if not, then i hope that you make sure it cant be passed to the innocent customers. thank you again.
