CONDITIONS FOR WORKING IN THE VICINITY OF PECO ELECTRIC TRANSMISSION LINES

ELECTRIC CONSTRUCTION STANDARDS

SECONDARY USES FOR RIGHTS-OF-WAY ALONG ELECTRIC TRANSMISSION LINES OF PECO AND ITS SUBSIDIARIES

1. Introduction

PECO electric transmission lines are high voltage power lines that move bulk power from substation to substation. Voltages vary from 69,000 to 500,000 volts. PECO's transmission lines are located in a transmission right-of-way which is a strip of land (corridor) that is either an easement or owned in fee. An easement is an agreement that grants PECO the right to build, maintain, modify and operate electric transmission lines as well as manage the vegetation in the easement area. Corridor widths vary by transmission line voltage and other factors. PECO has the right to prohibit anything in the right-of-way that would interfere with these rights or pose a threat to the safe and reliable operation of a transmission or other power line.

Minimum clearance requirements of the transmission lines to structures, vegetation and other obstructions are established by National Electric Safety Code (NESC) and enforced by the North American Electric Reliability Corporation (NERC) reliability standards. NERC is the organization responsible for ensuring the reliability of the power system in the United States and is certified by the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission (FERC).

2. Policy and Conformance

Proposed secondary uses for the right-of-way shall be submitted through the PECO Real Estate Department and must conform to the uses in Section 3.3 and 3.4 and comply with Electric Construction Standard S-7074, "General Conditions Regulating Approved Secondary Uses for Transmission Line Rights-of-Way of PECO and Its Subsidiaries." Uses listed in S-7072 Section 3.2 are not permitted. Subject to PECO approval, non-obstructive, compatible usage of the right-of-way based on safety, system reliability, location, zoning, and adjoining uses may be permitted. All such uses require PECO Engineering approval of both preliminary and final drawings and must comply with PECO and regulatory safety standards. Preliminary and final drawings must comply with PECO Electric Construction Standard S-7073, "Information Required to Evaluate Proposed Transmission Line Rights-of-Way Secondary Uses of PECO and Its Subsidiaries." This document has been developed to address the most frequently asked questions about property owner use of PECO's electric transmission rights-of-way and does not cover all restrictions or all possible situations
